ANTWERP, Aug. 17.—Today began badly for the American competitors in the Olympic games. In his first running broad jump Sol Butler, one of the most popular men in the contest, pulled a tendon in his leg and had to withdraw. His jump was marked at 6 meters 60 centimeters, and if he had made three centimeters more he would have qualified among the first six for the final.

Two other Americans, Carl Johnson and Templeton, took third and fifth places respectively, with distances of 6 meters 82 centimeters and 6 meters 67 centimeters.

Three Swedes and one Norwegian also qualified in first, second and fourth places, the longest jump being that of the Swede, Petersson—6 meters 94 centimeters.

America won the high jump with an Olympic record made by Landon of one meter ninety-three and six-tenth centimeters. France won the final of the 5,000-meter race, and England the final of the 800-meter contest.

King Flies to Games.

The Stadium was better filled than it has been on any previous day of the sports. King Albert flew over from Brussels in his airplane to see the final events in the afternoon. He chatted with all the winners for some minutes and somewhat embarrassed Landon by telling him he had jumped over his head, which is considerably above the athlete's own.

The 5,000-meter race was one of the most tremendous tests athletes have ever been put through. It was beautifully run from start to finish by Guillemot, the winning Frenchman, who half way, with the Finlander Nurmi in front of him, drew twenty yards beyond the others. In the last hundred yards he left the Finn twenty behind with a great rush of speed. His victory was really the great event of the day from the popular point of view, and the Americans, with a large contingent of Boy Scouts, joined in making a slogan of his name.

The 800-meter race provided a surprise. Rudd, the South African, was a popular favorite, and, in spite of a bad start, he had the race to himself at the 600-meter mark. Twenty yards from the tape, however, his ankle gave out owing to a depression in the soft track. The Englishman, Hill, and the American, Eby, were close behind him and sprinted. Hill, who was leading, was first away, and, though he made a magnificent effort, Eby was just too late at the tape, half a stride behind the Englishman.

Rudd collapsed just as he crossed the finish line. Campbell caved in fifty yards from home. He was "out" for fully five minutes. He was attended by a physician who had to resort to artificial respiration before he recovered sufficiently to leave the field.

Magnificent Jumping.

Landon's high jump was another magnificent performance, for the turf take-off was not good. He never failed in any attempt and the twelve competitors, who had survived the first tryout, were whittled down at the 1 meter 90 centimeters mark to six. Of the six, four were Americans, the other Americans being Murphy, Muller and Whalen.

Whalen was the first to go with the Englishman Baker and the three Americans were left to compete against the Swede Ekslund. At the 1 meter 93 centimeters mark the Swede tied with Muller for second place, and at the second trial Muller proved the victor.

Equal World's Record.

Six heats of the 110-meter hurdle race left four American survivors, all of them—H. E. Baron, F. Murphy, W. J. Yount and Walker Smith—winning their heats. The most interesting of these heats was the one in which H. E. Baron took first place from the Canadian, Earl Thomson. Baron was first off the mark, but the Canadian gained all the way and at the end contented himself with place, Baron's time being 0:15 1-5.

In the semifinals these stars were in different heats, Baron being in the first and Thomson in the second. With Smith a yard behind him and the Frenchman, Orfidan, third, Baron did the distance in the equal of the world's time of exactly 15 seconds.

Murray and Yount met Thomson in the next heat and the Canadian was forced to make the same time to win. Murray took second place, but the fight in the final is going to be a tremendous af-

L. A. CERF MISSING, FOUND IN HOSPITAL

DISAPPEARS IN MORNING

Failure to Keep Appointment with J. P. Morgan & Co. and to Visit Office Starts Search.

Louis A. Cerf, general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company and reputed to be one of three insurance agents in the country whose yearly income exceeds $100,000, was found in the Broad Street Hospital by relatives last night after a city-wide search had been started yesterday morning when he failed to keep appointments with E. R. Stettinius at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. and other bankers whom he was to see during the day.

It was learned by th relatives at the same time that a man was being held in the Old Slip Police Station on a charge of felonious assault upon Mr. Cerf. The circumstances of the case had not been cleared up last night by the relatives or by the police, but the story of the prisoner, Solomon Pincus, 21 years old, a jeweler of 1,678 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, was that Mr. Cerf had been jostled in a crowd in the Hudson tubes station at Cortlandt Street and had fallen, injuring himself.

The jeweler denied having struck the insurance agent, as had been charged by John McGisskin, a special patrolman of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company, who made the arrest. He said he would be able to bring in witnesses to prove his story.

Unconscious Several Hours.

Mr. Cerf's injury was diagnosed by surgeons at the Broad Street Hospital as a fractured skull, and he did not recover consciousness for several hours. He told relatives and the police then that he could not remember what had happened to him except that he had been injured while on his way to take a Hudson tube train to keep an appointment at the Newark offices of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company. This story was repeated to detectives who called at the hospital to question him.

Relatives became alarmed in the morning when they learned that members of Mr. Cerf's office force at 137 Broadway had not heard from him since he left his room at the Hotel Plaza, where he had spent the night after telephoning to his wife at their Summer home at Quogue that he would be forced to stay in town overnight. A son, Louis A. Cerf, Jr., had just come in from a vacation in Maine, and when he learned that his father had not made his usual calls—at his home, at his broker's office or at his own office—he sent in a report to the Bureau of Missing Persons at Police Headquarters through the East Fifty-first Street Police Station.

Secretaries in the Broadway office furnished a list of Mr. Cerf's appointments for the day, and they learned that he had failed to keep the first on the list. This was a conference with officials of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company at the home offices in Newark. Calling at other places in the belief that he might have jumped this one place, they could find no trace of him.

Fails to Call at Office.

It had been the custom of Mr. Cerf to call in at his office at noon to confer with his office staff, and when he failed to arrive there the alarm of the relatives was increased. He was to have called upon Edward R. Stettinius, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., at the firm's offices at 1:30 in the afternoon upon an appointment made for him by his secretary. Although Mr. Cerf had not been informed of this appointment, a call was sent to the offices of Mr. Stettinius, who reported also that Mr. Cerf had not come in.

Thinking that he might have been overcome by the heat and have wandered to the family home at 87 Lloyd Street, Montclair, N. J., relatives asked the Newark police to send a man to break into the house, which had been closed for the Summer. Inquiries also were also sent to the golf clubs at Montclair and Quogue in the belief that Mr. Cerf might have gone for a day's golfing and that his notification to the office had miscarried.

It was not until late in the evening that the detectives from the Bureau of Missing Persons received the information that a man who might be identified as Cerf was in the Broad Street Hospital suffering a fracture of the skull. A few minutes later they received the information from the Old Slip Station that a man was held there on a charge of felonious assault after having been arrested near the Hudson tubes station

TENNESSEE DELAYS VOTE ON SUFFRAGE; BEATEN IN CAROLINA

SUFFRAGISTS CLAIM GAIN

Senate at Raleigh Decides, 25 to 23, to Postpone Action Until 1921 Session

BUT MAY RECONSIDER VOTE

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 17.—Final action on ratification of the suffrage amendment by the lower House of the Tennessee Legislature has been put over to tomorrow morning. The resolution was to have come to a vote this afternoon, but after four hours of bitter personal debate, in which all the arguments, sectional, national, political and racial were used on either side, the members voted to adjourn until 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, when the fight will be resumed where it was left off today.

The vote for adjournment was 52 to 44. This was not strictly a "pro" and "anti" lineup. It resulted from two causes. The legislators, weary from hours of debate and wrangling, became restless and hungry and decided to quit for the day and anti-suffragists appeared to be afraid of a final vote and were anxious to postpone it until they could be more sure of their ground.

Women Crowd House.

The demonstration today was the greatest ever made in the Capitol of Tennessee. Hundreds of women, wearing red or yellow roses, as they were opposed or favored suffrage, crowded the floor and galleries. They held up every man who appeared on Capitol Hill and pinned some kind of rose on him. They were upon the floor of the House to make their pleas to the legislators until it was voted to bar everyone from the floor during the debate.

The negro question, States' rights, home rule, the woman's Bible issued some twenty-five years ago, railroad interests, political rings from Connecticut, New Hampshire and other Eastern States, and a score of other questions were introduced in the debate today.

Speaker Walker of the House, originally for ratification, took the floor to resent charges made against him and declared that the reasons which impelled him to work against ratification was the fact that favorable action by Tennessee would force suffrage upon other Southern States which have rejected ratification.

In view of the action of the North Carolina Senate today in postponing action until 1921 interest in the vote tomorrow is redoubled. There will be little sleeping tonight by either side and wavering legislators, of whom there are several, will not lack company.

Suffragists Beaten in North Carolina.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 17.—North Carolina was eliminated, at least temporarily, today from the fight for ratification of the Federal woman suffrage amendment in time for the women to vote in November. By a vote of 25 to 23 the State Senate decided to postpone action on the amendment until the next regular session of the Legislature, in 1921.

The blow came as a complete surprise to suffrage proponents. They had no advance word of the opposition's plan of action, and the postponement resolution went through before they could move to block its adoption.

The fight in the Senate may be renewed tomorrow, however. Suffrage leaders said an attempt to reconsider the postponement resolution might be made. In the meantime anti-suffrage forces prepared to take quick advantage of their victory. They planned to bring the ratification matter up under special order in the lower house tomorrow and dispose of it quickly. "Call it up and kill it right," was the way Representative Neal, anti-suffrage floor leader, described the plan.

The end of the contest came suddenly in the Senate, at a time when suffrage supporters were confident of victory in the upper chamber. At the conclusion of a day of heated debate, punctuated by charges and countercharges, some of which were vitriolic, Senator Scales, suffrage leader, announced he was ready for a vote.

The spokesman of the opposition forces, Senator Warren, was recognized by Lieutenant Governor Gardner, and he began the introduction of the resolution which upset the program of ratificationists. The roll call, which followed, closed the case.

Suffrage leaders attributed their defeat to Senators who were unable to determine the course which their constituents would have them take. There were half a dozen votes which neither side had been able to commit unreservedly. Their opportunity came to avoid a declaration at this time by voting to postpone action until after the coming election, into which the question has now been thrown as a State issue, it was said.

The anti-suffragists marched from the old State House in victorious process-

French Devise Air Torpedoes Guided by Shepherd Plane

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Flying torpedoes, directed by Hertzian waves, would be used if a new war broke out tomorrow, says an aviation expert in today's Petit Journal. The writer declares that the latest experiments of the French Aviation Service have proved that five or six small and inexpensive bomb planes, without a pilot or mechanician, can be successfully guided by a "shepherd" in a larger plane through the means of Hertzian waves.

In view of the present achievement of having a flock of little planes under perfect control, the writer prophesies that within a year or two it will be possible to direct accurately the former from a land base to a distance of 100 miles or more.

ORDERS SHAKEUP IN IMMIGRANT WORK

SEES ELLIS ISLAND HEAD

Intimation That the Force Here Will Be Raised to Pre-War Numbers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—A reorganization of the Immigration Service was ordered today by Assistant Secretary Post of the Labor Department, after an investigation said to have disclosed conditions indicating "utter disorganization" of the service.

The shakeup, it was said at the department, included not only the office of Commissioner General Caminetti, but also the coast stations and the field service.

Labor Department officials said that the conditions which led to investigation of the service were of long standing. The situation was called to the attention of Mr. Caminetti both by Secretary Wilson and the Solicitor of the Labor Department, before whom had been presented instances which they believed showed the disorganized state of the Immigration Service.

The plans of the department under its reorganization scheme were not disclosed. Mr. Post conferred today, however, with Commissioner Wallis of the Ellis Island station regarding the situation there due to shortage of personnel to handle the increasing tide of immigration. It was intimated that the force would be increased soon to a point approximating its size before the war checked immigration and the staff was reduced.

The first steps in the reorganization were taken by Assistant Secretary Post on July 21, when the Commissioner General was shorn of the authority which he had exercised for some time of making recommendations in appeal and warrant cases passing through his hands. The department contended that only the Secretary of Labor and the Assistant Secretary were empowered by law to exercise judgment in such cases.

On Aug. 14 a memorandum was prepared by Secretary Post inquiring into the "causes of and remedies for the disorganized conditions in the Bureau of Immigration and its consequent inefficiency." Certain "undesirable" conditions prevailing in the service were ordered remedied immediately. Among the conditions complained of were "the excessive freedom of access to the Immigration Bureau during working hours of persons not officially connected with the bureau."

To insure the removal of these "undesirable" conditions, which could be remedied only after minute investigation, an Advisory Committee was appointed to continue the inquiry. It included Alfred Hampton of the Immigration Service, H. B. Collins of the Solicitor's department and Hugh Reid, from the office of the Assistant Secretary of Labor.

GEN. MANGIN EXTOLS AMERICAN FIGHTERS

Tells Knights of Columbus the Secret of Victory Was Constant Attacking.

CHATEAU-THIERRY, France, Aug. 17.—General Mangin, who was in command of the French and American forces which launched the great counterattack against the Germans between Soissons and Château-Thierry in July, 1918, today guided the visiting Knights of Columbus delegates over the battlefields.

Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French Ambassador to the United States, and Captain Marcel Knecht, at one time a member of the French National Commission in the United States, interpreted the remarks of General Mangin, who described the progress of the battles.

Extolling American efforts in this sector, General Mangin said:

"The secret of victory is: Attack, attack, keep on attacking. That is what the Americans did, and that is how the war was won."

The Knights were received by local officials. They then placed a wreath in the American cemetery at Belleau Wood. When they returned from the cemetery the Mayor presented to them an engraved stone from the bridge defended by the Americans at Château-Thierry, which is to be given to the American Legion in the United States.

Later in the afternoon General Mangin conducted the delegation to the Soissons region, whence it returned to Paris. French military and naval attachés accompanied the party throughout the day.

NO SEPARATE PEACE IN JUSTICE TO DEAD, IS COX'S PLEDGE

That 'Dishonorable Deed' Must and Will Be Prevented, He Tells Ohio Democrats.

UNTRUTHS ABOUT LEAGUE

BAKER DEFENDS LEAGUE

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 17.—With a vigor of utterance and gesture which frequently brought his hearers to their feet, cheering, Governor James M. Cox, in addressing the Democratic State Convention here today, charged that Senator Harding not only represented the forces of reaction at present, but had appeared as a leader of reactionary interests which attempted in 1913 to block progress in Ohio by fighting to defeat the operation of the new Constitution for which the people had given an overwhelming vote.

Governor Cox coupled this charge with an extended attack upon the Republican leaders who, he said, were ready to wreck the League of Nations and "disgrace the nation" by making a separate peace with Germany.

Turning to his audience, and with a stamp of the foot, which resounded throughout the hall, he exclaimed:

"Standing at the head of the hosts of the great army which opposes the forces of reaction; standing at the head of the hundreds of thousands of independents of the country, I give to you this assurance: That this dishonorable deed will not be perpetrated."

A great wave of cheering broke loose in the hall as the Governor concluded this utterance, his head thrown back, his arms extended in emphasis of his declaration. There were cries from many parts of the hall, "We'll see to that," "We're with you there." It was some time before the Governor was able to proceed.

Charges Untruth on League.

In another part of his address Governor Cox went at some length into the question of reservations to the League covenant. Republicans were charged with speaking a "deliberate and willful untruth" in asserting that a situation could develop where statesmen overseas could order American soldiers anywhere.

"Presidential proprieties require that I do not characterize it in stronger language," the Governor exclaimed, and the audience broke into tumultuous applause.

The Governor was in his element, for he went to the convention, as he expressed it, to "look into the eyes" of the people who knew him and ask if any one could charge that he had failed to carry out a pledge made in the cause of progress as Governor of Ohio.

He realized, he said, that he was speaking to men and women who knew what conditions were in Ohio, what had been done and what had not been done. To them the Governor laid his views open and asked support.

"I will not see much of you Ohioans during this campaign," he said in concluding his address. "I will be busy elsewhere. The forty-eight delegates to the San Francisco Convention gave a pledge in your name that Ohio this year was safe. Speaking from my experience in the past, I'll leave this State to you. I intend to enter other States, and I may not see many of you until the 4th of March, 1921, when I hope to see the whole Democratic hosts on Pennsylvania Avenue."

The crowd of delegates and visitors were on their feet cheering again. "You get along! We'll take care of Ohio, all right," shouted a man near the platform. There was laughter and applause, and Governor Cox, with another wave of his arms and with the broadest of smiles on his face, bowed to the Chairman and withdrew.

The address of Governor Cox was distinctly an appeal to progressive voters of Ohio and the nation, regardless of party, to support him because he had carried out his pledges as Governor and was prepared to make the same promises as President. In his appeal he was joined by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Senator Atlee Pomerene and other speakers.

Secretary Baker received a high tribute from Governor Cox, and an ovation was given to him. He was formerly Mayor of Cleveland.

Cheers for the President.

There was enthusiasm in the convention for President Wilson also. When M. A. Daugherty of Lancaster, who presided, made reference to President Wilson early in his address the crowd interrupted him with cheers and a long demonstration followed.

The outstanding features of Governor Cox's address were his recital of the record of the Democratic Party in Ohio during the last eight years, his castigation of Senator Harding as a leader of the forces which attempted to check progress in Ohio as well as in the nation, and his discussion of the League of Nations issue, including the question of reservations and the alleged bad faith of the Republican leaders.

Senator Harding, he charged, had not only fought the adoption of the Ohio

Poles Report Destruction of Four Enemy Divisions; Artillery Fire and French Tactics Demoralize Reds

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The Poles have rallied. North of Warsaw, the crucial point of the whole struggle, their counterstroke has bitten deep into the right flank of the Red Army. The defense lines on the eastern outskirts of the city are holding well and the breaches the assailants had already made have been repaired.

That is the substance of the latest news received here this evening.

The Matin's Warsaw correspondent sends a dispatch dated today at 1 o'clock in the morning saying that the following proclamation of good cheer is being posted in the streets of the beleaguered city.

"People of Warsaw:

"The Government has received information of the victorious advance of our troops against the flank of the enemy forces attacking Warsaw. Our armies, under the personal leadership of the Commander in Chief, have already reached the line Karwolin-Zielekhow-Partchev. It is announced that four Bolshevist divisions have been destroyed in the north. Repeated assaults of the enemy against the Warsaw defense lines have been broken with heavy loss."

This information is confirmed by the French Foreign Office, which declares in addition that points in the eastern and northeastern defense lines lost by the Poles have been retaken, and that as well as in the north the southern counterattack in the region of Vladimir Volinsky is progressing favorably.

Double-Deck Auto Buses Help to Save Warsaw

WARSAW, Aug. 17.—Double-deck auto buses, similar to those in use on the Fifth Avenue line in New York City, helped save Warsaw from the Soviet menace. Just as taxicabs were used at the vital moment to save Paris in 1914 during the battle of the Marne, so the buses of Warsaw hauled troops to the front at the hour of this city's peril. The soldiers they carried were thrown into the foremost lines, where the danger was greatest.

There are renewed signs that the French are taking a more prominent part in the guidance of the Polish Army. French tactics are being used throughout the counter-action, and General Weygand is said to have inspired them.

The Poles are bringing into play batteries placed for the capital's defense line and are awaiting completion of the arrangements to strike at the Soviet forces with a rush of artillery, followed by repeated infantry attacks.

WASHINGTON SEEKS TO UNITE POWERS

CABINET TAKES UP CRISIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Exchanges are taking place between the United States and European Governments with a view to determining upon co-operation in assisting Poland, should that country be placed in danger of losing its independence at the hands of the Soviet Government at Moscow.

This information, obtained from authoritative sources today, shows that the United States is seeking to live up to the assurance in Secretary Colby's recent note that the Government would employ "all available means" to aid the Poles to maintain their political and territorial integrity.

A better outlook for an understanding between Great Britain, France and the United States, and perhaps Italy, in dealing with the critical state of affairs in Eastern Europe seems to have been produced by the diplomatic exchanges now in progress. The impression that the United States Government intended to act alone in all that it might undertake in behalf of Poland has been dispated by its course in connection with the Colby note. It is now clear that the Government is not opposed to some arrangement by which the principal powers interested in the preservation of the new Polish State will act in concert to that end.

Cabinet Meeting on Poland.

The Polish-Russian situation was discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet this afternoon, at which President Wilson presided. Nothing was disclosed as to the details of the discussion, but other information points to an effort to bring this Government and the European Powers into harmony as to means of handling the crisis, and it is supposed that this particular question was the main topic considered. There are certain differences between the powers as to a course of procedure, but it is felt that there is a foundation of mutual agreement that will lead to some common plan of action.

The hands of the United States Government seem to be tied as far as giving material aid to the Poles is concerned. No troops could be sent without the consent of Congress, and in order to obtain that it would be necessary for the President to call the Senate and the House into extra session, something that is believed to be unwise at this particular time, when the conduct of the foreign relations of the United States has become a bone of contention between the major political parties. Authority to make loans or furnish war supplies is found in wartime legislation, but the officials concerned are convinced that they would act without warrant to construe this legislation as applying to the present situation. The question has also been raised as to the WARSAW, Aug. 15.—One is amazed at the international character of the Polish munitions. There are French whippet tanks and American tunics. Here are German, Polish and Russian uniforms in close and intimate union, and one youth on horseback is resplendent in a cape with the blue collar and yellow facings of a Hungarian Hussar regiment. For the present Polish Army saw service with many countries before Poland came into its own. The artillery, too, and rifles are drawn from many sources, and only the transport is really and awfully Polish.

But it is life behind the front which is most interesting. Everybody seems to be digging, and Poland this side of the Vistula has already suffered considerable territorial changes. Gangs of men, including Jews, everywhere are at work digging trenches. The farmhouses all seem to have their own particular private trench system, dug by the women and children while the husband is fighting or driving the family possessions into Warsaw. Barbed wire, too, is everywhere, either fixed in position or dumped down in coils ready to be strung.

Truly the Russian troops have hard work ahead of them ere they reach Warsaw if frontal attacks are intended, and the Polish troops are as strong as they undoubtedly are cheerful, singing in the front line as beautifully as when marching through the streets of the capital.

Pitiful Spectacle of Refugees.

Amidst all this litter of transport, diggers and wire flows on that increasing stream of refugees which grips and torments every time one sees it. In every hollow, spinny and copse one sees families camping out on their way to Warsaw. On the main road and in the open country they walk, trudge or stumble forward with bleeding feet, and pain in their hearts, but no resentment in their patient Slav faces, only that dumb sorrow that knows but cannot understand. As one looks at them one realizes that something more is being added to the Slav tradition of suffering and in that undefined No Man's Land where Poles or Russians may be expected with equal probability one sees great farm houses bereft of tenantry, furniture and live stock, and comfortable stock yards standing empty; for everything that had been harvested has been cleared and only the standing crops left to rot in hungry Central Europe.

When one sees all this, one returns to Warsaw somewhat hurt and smarting because human beings are suffering and crops are being wasted and men are thinking in terms of guns and barbed wire in this present year of grace.

An ironical touch was added by a little group of five Bolshevist prisoners

WARSAW, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—Reports of Polish military successes came to Warsaw today while the population was eagerly awaiting news from Minsk, where the Polish peace delegates are to negotiate with the representatives of the Russian Soviet Government. The only report of the delegates was a Moscow wireless message stating that the party had arrived in Minsk.

A successful counter-offensive was launched on the Warsaw front Monday under the leadership of President Pilsudski as Commander in Chief. On the northern line, where ten Bolshevist divisions are striking toward the Vistula as part of the manoeuvre against the capital, and on the Warsaw front, it is announced that the Reds have been driven back in confusion at several points.

Polish movements, aided by heavy artillery, are forcing the Bolsheviki gradually to withdraw from various places where for days pressure upon Warsaw has been greatest. Allied officers say that any immediate danger of the city falling has now passed and that the Soviet troops are on the run.

Poles Again Hold Ciechanow.

The official communique announces that the Poles in following up their counter-offensive have advanced along the entire northern front. They have pushed the Russians beyond the Wkra River and regained Ciechanow, the Soviet forces retreating while Polish aviators fired on them with machine guns.

In the fighting in the region of Radzymin, northeast of Warsaw, the Poles have taken many prisoners, including a Bolshevist Commissary and a brigade commander. During the battle here a Polish Chaplain of the Eighth Infantry Division, Ignacy Korupka, was killed while leading the attacking forces clad in his church robes and with a crucifix in his hand. Five Polish officers were also killed and eleven were wounded.

The west bank of the Vistula has been cleared of the Bolshevist cavalry detachment which had crossed the river to the northwest of Plosk. The Soviet horsemen in this move were making an effort to sever Warsaw's remaining line of railroad communication with Danzig.

The Bolsheviki, who had planned to cross the Vistula southeast of Warsaw in the region of Maciejowice (thirty-five miles from the capital), were also forced back.

The right wing of the Fourth Polish Army, in breaking the Soviet resistance at Kock (thirty-two miles south of Seidlce) took 200 Russians prisoner, and captured one cannon and fourteen machine guns.

Airplanes and Tanks in Action.

Modern implements of war, undreamed of in the day of Kosciusko and other defenders of Warsaw, are being brought into play against the invaders. Airplanes sail away on bombing raids upon the Soviet forces, and there are tanks which have seen service in France and cannon which with one shot could shatter some of Warsaw's buildings that have stood for more than 150 years. There are also armored speed boats on the Vistula, armed with machine guns, the dread of modern soldiers.

Implements of these types are not here in great numbers, but there are some, with other types in addition, which were supplied by the Allies according to agreement. During today tanks crept through the streets, heartening the population. At intervals, too, marched fresh infantry just from the training quarters. Late this afternoon a detachment of gayly attired lancers of the kind which are famous in Polish history passed through to the front, singing. They were mounted on horses some of which a few weeks ago were dragging carriages about the streets of the city.

Travelers arrived here yesterday afternoon on a delayed train from Danzig which was held up because the railroad was under Russian artillery fire southwest of Thorn, where the road parallels the Vistula. Among the passengers were several allied officers, who said the shells apparently came from the right bank of the Vistula, where the Russians seemed to have succeeded in bringing up long range guns. This is the only spot along the front where guns of larger calibre than 77 millimetres have been noticeable.

Great numbers of Russian prisoners began to reach Warsaw Sunday afternoon. They came in groups of twenty or thirty, and sometimes in droves of hundreds, attracting crowds of the capital's residents out for a Sunday stroll. The prisoners were uniformed in dull, ash-colored jumpers and trousers, bearing resemblance to laborers emerging from a steel mill.

The Fire Department has been called into service to aid in caring for the wounded, hose wagons and other apparatus meeting ambulances at Praga, across the Vistula.

Poles Attack Corridor Invaders.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The French Foreign Office this evening reported successful Polish counteroffensive from Thorn to clear out the Polish Corridor, and also along the entire southern front.

In the neighborhood of Cholm, on the southern sector, Russian forces which had crossed the Bug River have been hurled back across that stream, while in the region of Novo-Georgievsk, northwest of the capital, the Poles have begun a counteroffensive, directing their attack in the direction of Mlawa.

Military critics here pointed out late last night that the situation was better than it had been for some time, and laid special stress upon the attack against the Bolsheviki near Cholm. They also said there were indications that the Polish command had decided to make necessary sacrifices on the southern front in Eastern Galicia.

The battle near Cholm may be a precursor of an offensive movement designed to draw southward Soviet forces engaged against Warsaw, it was said, although some believed it was the Polish intention to merely gain time in the struggle. Little significance was placed in the Polish attack near Novo-Georgievsk, as critics considered that simultaneous attacks on both flanks of the Soviet army would be rash and almost desperate.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Soviet forces are centring their attack upon Warsaw in the region northeast of Novo-Georgievsk, the powerful Polish fortress on the Vistula to the northwest of the capital, and along the line southeasterly, it is indicated by Monday's official statement from Moscow, received today. The communique reflects the recent Polish withdrawal on the southern front and confirms the occupation by the Russians of Brody and Sokal, northeast of Lemberg, previously announced from other sources. The statement reads:

"Northeast of Novo-Georgievsk and Warsaw fierce fighting continues in which we flung back the enemy with a bayonet attack and occupied a number of villages west of the River Wkra.

"In Eastern Galicia, after fierce fighting on Aug. 14, we occupied Sokal and Brody. In the region of Tarnapol our advance is developing."

Thousands of the citizens of Posen have joined in a great demonstration, begging the Entente nations to save Poland, says a dispatch from that city to the London Times. This message, which was dated yesterday, makes no reference to the establishment of a new Polish Government in Posen, rumors of which have been current here during the last couple of days.

RED ENVOY DENIES COMPACT WITH BERLIN

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The Socialist press today publishes a telegram from Kameneff indignantly denying the existence of a secret compact between the Bolsheviki and Germany. After a violent attack upon the capitalist press, the Soviet envoy declares:

First, that the Soviet Government has not concluded with Germany or other countries conventions aimed directly or indirectly against Poland; second, that the conditions of the armistice and peace preliminaries, contain nothing about German-Polish relations or the frontiers of Germany and Poland; third, that the Soviet Government indignantly rejects the thought that its victory over Polish imperialists is to be used for the benefit of German imperialists or any other imperialists. The Bolsheviki, he says, disapprove of German imperialists just as much as of French imperialists.

This statement is in flat contradiction to the information collected by French representatives and secret agents in Germany and Poland. The Foreign Office here asserts that it has absolute proof that the Germans and the Bolsheviki are in collusion to obtain direct land communication between Germany and Soviet Russia, uncontrolled by any other power. Kameneff might reply that this is for purely economic purposes, and it is true that as regards political conventions the French are less definite, though they have every reason to believe that pourparlers to this end are being actively carried on. This contradiction between the statements of the French and Kameneff is highly important, as it forms the prime cause of the "divergence" between France and Great Britain. The English appear to believe Kameneff; the French prefer to trust their own information.

The explanation is perhaps simpler than might be supposed. From a long way off one is disposed to think of Soviet Russia as an absolute unit directed by a single thought. Despite the paramount influence of Lenin, it is more probable that, just as in America, England or France, there are differences of opinion in Russia, and that Russian policy varies as the view of one or another section prevails. Thus, one party may be all for striking while the iron is hot and aiming straight at at world revolution while the prestige of victory is with the Reds. Others, again, may be animated more by Russian nationalism than by communistic theory and aim principally at the recovery of Russia's ancient boundaries and greatness. A third group, which appears at present to be nearest to control, evidently thinks it a good opportunity to consolidate the ground already won by obtaining, if possible, recognition, and certainly peace, from the outer world.

This party has a strong economic argument in its favor, but finds it difficult to resist the hot heads led by Trotsky, Radek and the sinister Chief of the Extraordinary Commission, Djerdjinski. The latter is of Polish origin and is reported to be at the head of the new Polish soviet formed in the invaded area. The policy that will ultimately prevail will probably be determined by the course of events. Like London and Paris, Moscow is awaiting the result of the struggle for Warsaw.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE SEEKING AN ACCORD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—While the fate of Warsaw hangs in the balance the French and British Foreign Offices are working overtime to patch "divergencies" in the fabric of the entente cordiale. In Paris a subtle diplomatic comedy is being played for the benefit of the public, which daily receives through the press discreetly innocuous communiqués about the conversations of British Ambassador Derby and Foreign Office Director Paleologue.

A conditional accord is said to have been reached. According to this, if Warsaw falls the French will climb down and follow the pacific trend of the British Government. Unless, of course, the Bolshevist conditions are intolerably rigorous, which the British ever will not be the case. In return, not only as a salve to French pride but to allay very real French anxiety, Lloyd George will once more strongly reiterate the decision that Germany will be forced to disarm in the period and on the conditions prescribed at Spa.

If the Reds are beaten the French will press their demand that Britain take no further steps at present for recognition of the Soviet Government.

WRANGEL'S ARMY NOW 150,000 MEN

REDS HAVE 450,000 TROOPS

SEBASTOPOL, Aug. 13 (Associated Press).—The military forces of General Wrangel, head of the anti-Bolshevist Government in South Russia, now aggregate about 150,000 men, one-third of whom are high-class troops. Russian officers estimate that the Bolshevist forces arrayed against General Wrangel are at present about 50,000 in number. Their estimates are that the Soviets have some 300,000 troops on the Polish front and 100,000 reserves available elsewhere.

General Wrangel's recognition by France and the announcement that a French diplomat would be sent here immediately caused great rejoicing in the South Russian army, which expects other European powers to follow the action of the French Government.

Peter Struve, Wrangel's Minister of Foreign Affairs, returning from Paris, told The Associated Press correspondent that all South Russia would rally to the General's command.

Wrangel's policy is actually giving the land to the peasants and promising that the Government will stand between them and the old owners and will grant them "new papers." General Wrangel is assuring the land owners that they will be paid eventually for the property, the remuneration to be determined by a popularly elected Assembly. As a guarantee of his good faith, the General's wife, Baroness Wrangel, went to her own estates in Northern Crimea and personally supervised division of her land among the peasants.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Soviet Russia, through M. Kameneff, head of her trade mission here, has asked Premier Lloyd George for a precise definition of the British attitude toward General Baron Wrangel, commander of anti-Bolshevist forces in Southern Russia.

In a long letter to the Premier M. Kameneff quotes all dispatches which were exchanged between the British and Russian Bolshevist Governments concerning General Wrangel, beginning with the dispatch from Earl Curzon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to George Tchitcherin, Bolshevist Foreign Minister, on April 14. It was this message which urged a termination of hostilities and the disbandment of General Wrangel's troops on the basis of amnesty being granted them.

M. Kameneff declares this dispatch induced the Soviet Government to refrain from military measures which would have destroyed General Wrangel powerless and he seeks to show it was British indecision relative to its Russian policy which encouraged General Wrangel and led to the present situation and recognition of General Wrangel by France.

He intimates that Great Britain is largely responsible for this recognition being extended.

Premier Lloyd George, in a detailed reply to the request of Kameneff, states that the British Government never had the intention to detach the Crimea from Russia, or secure its possession to General Wrangel, or encourage Wrangel in his offensive. The British Government, adds the Premier, is only concerned with insuring the safety of troops and refugees under Wrangel, who, Mr. Lloyd George says, has been warned that the British will decline all responsibility if he undertakes an offensive.

Mr. Lloyd George then explains that the British Government would only feel bound to reconsider this attitude in the event of the Soviet proposing terms infringing the independence of Poland.

VIENNA, Aug. 16.—A Danube gunboat today seized a barge outside Vienna which was conveying machine guns and ammunition.

The war materials were alleged to be French and were said to have come via Bavaria on the way to Rumania for shipment to General Baron Wrangel.

POLISH TROOPS SING AS THEY FACE FOE

into which I ran upon the homeward journey. One was a Kalmuck and another a Chinaman, while the other three were all of divergent types, but all were alike in their utter misery of rags and hunger. All were alike in stating that they had fought in Kolchak's and Denikin's armies, having been compelled by them to fight, as now they had been compelled by the Bolsheviki to fight after being taken prisoner, and all were alike in confessing that they knew nothing as to what it was all about, but that life had become for them simply a matter of fighting for whoever collared them.

And one realized that the invading Russians were enduring the same dumb suffering as were the refugees whom they were driving in front of them.

Joy in Recaptured Radzymin.

RADZYMIN, Poland, via Warsaw, Aug. 16.—There seems no doubt that things are going much better for the Poles and that the pressure on Warsaw is being relieved. The Bolshevik appear to have thought the Poles would go on retreating as they had hitherto done, but now when they have run up against prepared positions and found the Polish Army ready to hit back the Russians have shaken their heads and retired somewhat disgusted and surprised.

Whether they will again attack the prepared positions or try out flanking operations remains to be seen, but from all parts of the line come reassuring news and there seems no doubt that the Bolshevist first attempts upon the Warsaw defenses have been a failure.

Here at Radzymin one is close on the heels of the Russian Army. Yesterday I was unable to enter the little town as the Russians were temporarily in possession and all I could do was to look at its two white church towers as seen over the Polish and Bolshevist lines. Between then and now, however, the Polish counterattack has cleared the town once more and I have been able to enter it in a motor car.

The counter attack must have been quite a smart piece of work, and besides having resulted in the capture of 163 prisoners it carried the Polish line some three or four kilometers beyond the town.

The Bolshevist artillery is at present throwing shrapnel and high explosives into its late quarters, but in a rather desultory manner, and only the few remaining pigs and poultry seem much concerned. Radzymin has been pretty well knocked about in the process of becoming historical in this campaign, and tumbled houses and fires here and there prove the accuracy of yesterday's Polish bombardment.

The few inhabitants who stayed on during the Bolshevist temporary occupation are all bubbling over with excitement, although nothing special happened. The Bolsheviki committed no excesses on either persons or property and spent most of their time looking for food and blankets, but many horses were shot down in the last cavalry rush into the town, and their carcasses make the main street a rather unsavory locality. The remaining inhabitants of Radzymin and the whole army are immensely proud that the town has been recaptured, and quite a new spirit is now manifesting itself.

In Novo Georievsk, where I was earlier in the day, the garrison was pleased with itself. This fortress city is the base from which the Warsaw defense system springs, and the Russian troops penetrated as far as the outer forts. Artillery fire, however, held them up, and Polish infantry later drove them back, so that at the time of my visit to one of these outer forts the Bolsheviki had already retired some fourteen kilometers.

35 AMERICANS HELD AS SOVIET HOSTAGES

They Are Among 1,000 Foreigners in Moscow Who Are Hoping for Release Before Winter.

TERIJOKI, Finland, Russian Frontier, Aug. 9 (Associated Press)—A thousand foreigners, including thirty-five Americans, are now at Moscow, hoping for action by their Governments to get them out of Russia before Winter sets in. They include, besides the Americans, 700 French, 100 British and 100 Scandinavians.

Aside from the thirty-five of undoubted American citizenship, there are a large number claiming American citizenship who have gathered from all parts of Russia because of the impossible living conditions, and who are awaiting Bolshevist permission to leave. They are the last of Russia's pre-war foreign resident population.

Inquiries by The Associated Press correspondent, prior to his deportation to Finland from Moscow because he had not received advance Soviet authorization for a trip from Vladivostok to the Soviet capital, developed that many foreigners had been refugees in Moscow for more than a year. An trainload of French once was sent to the Russian frontier and then returned because of the attitude of the French Government toward the Bolsheviki.

The Americans in Moscow say their status is worse than that of the citizens of any other country. They are held virtually as hostages while the Soviet tries to force Washington to negotiate officially with Moscow or the Bolshevist agents.

The officials of the Bolshevist Foreign Office consider the United States the most uncompromising of all nations in her attitude toward the Soviet, although not as antagonistic as the British or French.

Five Americans are known to be imprisoned in Moscow. Among them are Dr. A. W. Stickney, geologist, and his wife, who recently arrived in Moscow from Siberia. The others are Royal C. Keely, a man named Lamark, and a naturalized American Greek, named Calimidianov, who has been imprisoned a year and a half, charged with being a spy.

The prisoners are inaccessible and little is known of their condition. H. D. T. Reynolds, an American mining engineer, is not permitted to leave Semipalatinsk, Siberia, the Bolsheviki demanding his services there.

A half dozen other Americans have been imprisoned in Moscow at different times during the last two years.

The Americans stranded in Russia are for the most part long-time residents who did not leave in the Fall of 1918, when the United States diplomats withdrew. Some lacked the finances necessary for the trip to Siberia and the Far East, which was the only exit, while others were ill or lived in distant provinces.

Since the consular offices departed there has been no official method of negotiations with the Bolsheviki. Individual appeals to the Foreign Office met with the reply that Americans would not be permitted to leave Russia until the American authorities would negotiate with the Soviet leaders regarding their repatriation, probably involving terms of exchange for Communists in the United States. Anarchist deportees who already have arrived in Russia from America are declared not wanted.

The Americans in Russia recently nominated H. C. Carlson, a former business representative in Moscow, to register the Americans and handle their affairs with the Soviet authorities.

The Americans have nothing of their own, foreigners having been treated the same as Russians in regard to requisition and nationalization.

MINSK GIVES OUT NO WORD OF PARLEY

British Opinion Regards the Conference as Acid Test of Bolshevist Professions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 18.—There was no news from Minsk today, although the conference between the Russian and Polish delegates is understood to be in session. The set-back suffered by the Bolshevist troops attacking Warsaw is expected to have an appreciable effect on the attitude of the respective delegates. The bulk of British opinion seems to be that the victory of either side, the Bolsheviki or the Poles, would not help to the conclusion of peace.

General Wrangel is looking for other powers to follow France's lead, but Lloyd George in his reply to the Soviet Commissioner Kameneff's note of Monday makes it clear that the British Government will only reconsider its attitude in regard to the Wrangel Government in case the Soviet Government proposes to Poland terms which would infringe the independence of that country.

Put in a nutshell the whole future depends on the developments at Minsk, which will furnish the acid test of the Soviet professions. It is recognized here that in their international dealings the Soviet Government seem to shift to and fro between rival tendencies. One of these tendencies interprets the term of self-determination in its obvious sense, the other construes it to mean imposing the Bolshevist system of Government by force upon other countries, beginning with Poland.

Until it is clearly established what the Russian Soviet Government means by its proposal to arm the workers of Poland, British opinion will hesitate to accept Asquith's plea that the Soviet Government should be openly recognized.

Some of the sober members of the Labor Party are showing signs of cold feet, and there is a strong probability that the "Council of Action" will ere long lapse into innocuous desuetude.

'BLACK HOUSE' FOR CAPITOL

Negroes to Erect Residence Near White House for Leader.

Candidates for the offices of Provisional President of Africa and leader of negroes in this country outlined their policies last night at the convention of the Universal Negro Improvement Association in Liberty Hall, 120 West 138th Street. Balloting for both offices will take place tomorrow night. A Black House will be erected near the White House in Washington in the next few months and will be used as the residence of the leader of the 15,000,000 negroes in this country, Marcus Garvey, Chairman of the convention and one of the candidates for Provisional President, said in his address.

"For fifty years the leaders of the negro race have been cringing men," Garvey said. "This is ended. We are unable to elect a leader to the White House, but we intend to have a Black House in Washington where one of our race will serve us four years." Candidates who told why they ought to be chosen to live in the Black House were Dr. J. Gordon of Los Angeles; W. M. Trotter and W. C. Matthews of Boston, Dr. J. W. Eason, Leroy Bundy, J. D. Brooks and C. John Bruce of this city.

EX-KAISERIN ILL AGAIN.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 17.—Although the recent visits of all the ex-Kaiser's sons to the House of Doorn have doubtless been due to the state of the ex-Kaiserin's health, this is systematically denied on behalf of the family.

Saturday night the ex-Kaiserin had another bad heart seizure, her condition causing the doctors to remain the whole night at her bedside.

Adalbert was the last Prince to visit Doorn. Like Eitel Friederich, he visited the ex-Crown Prince at the Island of Wieringen before returning to Germany.

GERMANS EXPECT COUP BY FRANCE

BERLIN, via Copenhagen, Aug. 16.—According to German military experts, the capitulation of Warsaw is only a question of a very short time, whereupon the Bolshevist Polish Government recently established at Brest-Litovsk will be transferred to the Polish Capital, and its first act will be to make peace with the Russian Soviet Government.

This is the situation reflected in the news printed in the German press, but all agree that Germany has nothing to fear from Russia, and that the Russian Government will make no effort to extend soviet methods beyond the old German-Polish frontier.

Nevertheless, there is great alarm over the general Polish situation, and it was this that prompted the Socialist members, Hermann, Mueller, Scheidemann and Wells, to call together the Reichstag Committee on Foreign Affairs.

What worries these Socialist statesmen most is the fact that they have received reports that France is contemplating astonishing the world with another fait accompli and that, contrary to French assurances, large forces are being concentrated in the Rhenish districts and in Alsace-Lorraine, apparently intended for transportation to the scene of the Russo-Polish operations.

Furthermore, there are reports from various important railway centres that whole trains containing war material shipped from France to Poland have been stopped en route by the railway men's and other labor organizations which are determined that the Polish Government shall not receive aid. In some cases these trains contained only supplies for French troops in occupied German districts, but even the German authorities failed to convince the railway men, in Ratibor, Annaberg, Nensa and Iworkau, who switched the suspected trains to "dead" tracks, where they remain despite all French threats and all coaxing by the German authorities. It is this obstinacy on the part of German workmen which has caused the Socialist leaders to convoke the Reichstag Committee on Foreign Affairs. They fear that control of the German masses will slip entirely from their hands if French shipments through Germany multiply.

These railway men are not confessed Bolsheviki and would perhaps remain loyal to the present German Government; but when you hear them talk you must be convinced that they, like all other German laborers, are quite willing to give Sovietism a fair chance if it comes. The Independent Socialists express only a qualified acceptance of certain Bolshevist doctrines, but the Communists declare openly for the speedy introduction of the Soviet system.

Wilhelm Pieck, who is the editor of the Communist organ Rote Fahne, and is generally regarded as the spokesman of his party, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent quite frankly and fearlessly that his party was convinced that a Bolshevist revolution in Germany was a question of only a few months. Replying to further questions, Pieck said:

"This revolution cannot be accomplished without heavy fighting. Indeed, we expect a terrible civil war."

He said the German Communist Party had its own Ambassador in Moscow in the person of the Communist leader Levy, who kept the Berlin Central Communist Bureau closely informed regarding Lenin's plans.

"It has been decided," continued Pieck, "that the Russian armies shall refrain from any attack upon German territory because such aggression might furnish the Reactionaries with an effective war cry against us. Still, we know much bloodshed will be necessary before our Junker landlords and capitalists capitulate. We have no Red armies, as the reactionary papers say. Our armies yet stand behind the furnaces in the mines and factories; but these men will prove superior to the mercenaries who are expected to protect the oppressors of the people. We know how reliable they are. They will go with the masses when the day comes."

"When will that be?" asked THE TIMES correspondent.

"It is impossible just now to say whether it will come in one or two months, or even within a year. Personally and from information received from Moscow, I believe Bolshevism will seek easier fields of operation in Serbia, Bulgaria, Rumania and Italy before Germany is quite ripe. But, of course, the situation created on the German frontiers may upset Moscow strategy. The speedily approaching financial collapse, the wholesale closing of factories and the consequent idleness of the masses seem all to be speeding developments which can end only with the dictatorship of the proletariat."

REDS TO DEMAND ACCESS TO GERMANY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—The Russian Government's intentions if the Minsk negotiations fail and its relations with other countries were disclosed to me today in an interview with Victor Kopp, the Soviet representative here. He has just returned from Moscow. The conversation on both sides was quite frank and Kopp gave me definite answers to all my questions without seeking to impose Bolshevist opinions or ideas.

Asked first as to the Polish corridor he replied:

"From our standpoint there are two corridors, that which leads to the sea and that which leads to Germany. In regard to the first we shall insist on having from Poland the right of direct railway communication between Russia and the sea. But the main question of a corridor is a Polish-German one. It only concerns us to this extent: We must demand from the Poles unconditional right of through transport between Russia and Germany."

"When I pointed out that the Russian General commanding forces already in the corridor had declared that the Bolsheviki would only leave when that territory had been restored to Germany, Kopp said:

"That is perhaps his personal opinion. I can only say that the German Government has not even yet made known to us any wishes it may have in the matter. It is a matter of indifference to us to whom the corridor belongs, but we shall insist on free, unhindered communications with Germany. We lay the greatest importance on the resumption of normal economic relations with Germany. That only depends now on the restoration of diplomatic relations, in regard to which only few formalities remain to be completed."

"And your relations with England?" I asked.

"We believe with certainty," was the reply, "that England is determined not to pursue a policy of intervention in Russia. We don't even believe in the blockade."

"Then you have full confidence in regard to England?" I queried.

To which Kopp answered with a quizzical smile. House would be sought before any doubtful question of British obligations was interpreted as a casus belli and before any hostile operations, direct or indirect, were put in hand.

Herbert H. Asquith found little support for his argument that the time had come in Britain to recognize the Soviet Government definitely; for, with the Minsk negotiations apparently at last about to begin and to furnish clear proof of whether the Soviet pledges regarding Polish independence are or are not to be relied upon, there is no reason for precipitancy. That Mr. Lloyd George made no reply to Mr. Asquith on this point caused no surprise, but there was a certain feeling of disappointment that the Premier had nothing further to say on the subject of Anglo-French relations. His speech implied that there would be no swerving from the declared British policy, but the members would have liked to receive an inkling of the reply which had been made by the Premier to the request put in by Kameneff on behalf of the Soviet Government for "a final decision on the British Government's attitude toward General Wrangel." The main point made by Kameneff was that the British Government by arranging armistice negotiations in the Crimea in April last gave Wrangel an opportunity of preparing his military plans, "whereby Wrangel has been enabled to wait for the moment when he has at last received recognition by Great Britain's ally, France."

"We know all workers who have nothing to do with the ideas or spirit of the old Generals. The Red Army is firmly in the hands of its leaders, and its leaders firmly in the hands of the Soviet Government."

"Never will the great majority of the Russian people accept the Soviet régime. The Southern Russian Army, under the command of General Wrangel, marches with the Cossack democratic forces, who have never and will never recognize the Soviet power, and are carrying on a heroic struggle against the Bolshevist usurpers.

"While fighting on his front General Wrangel has realized measurable agrarian reforms giving satisfaction to the peasants. While re-establishing democratic organs of administration he has taken radical measures to prevent pogroms, and other outrages, and has systematically enforced the principle of legality.

"Mr. President, in the name of all the united forces of Russian cultivated society and the democratic Cossacks, we address ourselves to you praying that it will be your pleasure to use all your influence in order that your noble country may help in the saving of Russian civilization of today, giving moral and material support to the Russian national forces under General Wrangel in order that the struggle with Russian Bolshevism may be conducted to a victorious issue.

"We believe that a conference at London with the Bolsheviki will present an immense danger and reinforce the moral authority of the Soviet power. If, however, it takes place, we hope that powerful representatives of the American Republic will take part and will defend the integrity of Russia against the Bolsheviki.

"Mr. President, only the active participation of your Government in the Russian question can bring about a rapid settlement of Bolshevism in Russia and in the entire world.

"UNION."

ITALIANS CRITICISE NOTE.

American 'Plutocracy' Dictates Attitude Toward Russia, Paper Says.

ROME, Aug. 16. — The first editorial comment by newspapers here on the recent note to Italy from Secretary of State Colby regarding the Russian situation appeared today.

The Tribuna says that without recognizing General Baron Wrangel, the anti-Bolshevist commander in South Russia, America "resolutely gravitates toward France," and adds that it must not be forgotten that "besides the abstract, theological America represented by Wilson, another, more real, exists, of natural, enthusiastic, simple plutocracy, which has nothing to do with the democratic policies of world conciliation."

Continuing, the newspaper declares:

"The war mentality has now turned to concrete aims of peace countable in money; and these instincts have developed a new virility consisting of the kind of political and financial eugenics typically American, partly Puritan, partly pioneer and partly profiteer. It is not strange if the political spheres reflecting this economic intolerance of the ancient, cultured plutocracy from the other side of the Alps, has found a suitable ally regarding Russia in the primitive, unbridled plutocracy from the other side of the ocean."

The Idea Nazionale says:

"The energetic, precise note unveils those international political deceivers who preach the gospel of peace while waving the bloody sword over Europe's head. The note, while it cannot interrupt the policy of approach to Russia, can at least moderate the too great haste of the Italian political authorities."

The newspaper thinks the note greatly strengthens France's policy.

WASHINGTON SEEKS TO UNITE POWERS

right of the United States to use the warships ordered to the Baltic to participate in a physical blockade of ports through which supplies might be forwarded to Soviet territory.

Government Has a Plan of Action.

In the circumstances, it is difficult to see from surface indications what this Government could do to help the Poles against Bolshevist aggression should assistance from the United States be deemed essential. But it is broadly intimated that the Government has plans in view that will overcome the difficulty. Nothing is obtainable as to what these plans are, officials taking the position that it would be very unwise to disclose them until it is clear that the Soviet Government intends to crush out Polish independence.

That the declarations contained in the Colby note have impressed the European powers is assumed from their evident willingness to discuss the American position. If Great Britain could be convinced that a serious error would be committed if that Government recognized the Moscow Government the United States would feel that it had made headway toward the adoption of a Russian policy that accorded with its own views.

RUSSIANS URGE WILSON TO SUPPORT WRANGEL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The following appeal has been cabled to President Wilson by the Union for the Regeneration of Russia here:

"Mr. President: Humanity, wearied by the war, has not yet realized the mortal danger it is running, due to the fact that Bolshevism is being supported, not by ideas, but by armed force and indescribable terror.

"If Bolshevism be not vanquished, Russia will extend herself over all countries, bearing a new world war which will assume the character of fraticidal slaughter. Already Bolshevism has implanted itself in Poland, threatens Germany, and knocks at the gates of Czechoslovakia.

"The English Government had the intention to conclude peace with the Bolsheviki, which would give recognition to the Soviet power and be the same as recognizing the Third Internationale, which is pledged to destroy the present social order by violence and the force of arms.

"Mr. President, the Bolshevist army and the Soviet power can only be defeated by armed force. Victory over the bloody dictatorship of Lenin can only be brought about by the Russian national forces, materially, morally technically supported by all the civilized peoples.

WARNED LABORITES NOT TO BLOCK PEACE

ANXIETY ABOUT OUR POLICY

British Opinion Thinks American Support May Stiffen the French Attitude.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—In his discussion of the Russo-Polish situation, in the House of Commons last night, Premier Lloyd George characterized the formation of the Labor Council of Action as "one of the most formidable challenges ever given to democracy," and added: "Without hesitation every Government must accept that challenge."

A member interjected: "I hope they will." Mr. Lloyd George rejoined: "Certainly they will."

In closing his speech the Premier said: "Resolutions like those passed by the Labor Conference Friday last will not help peace. They arose deep fear and anxiety in the minds of millions in this country. Fear is the most prolific cause of war. They threaten the people of this country with the very consequences which upset the judgment of Polish statesmen. I ask them to reflect upon the fear—it may be an unreasonable fear—that democratic institutions are to be subverted and some new tyrannical idea is to be imposed by force of arms. That disturbs the balance of mind not merely of the statesmen but of the people behind them. There is nothing which conduces more to revolutionary wars than that fear which thrills and frightens Britain.

"I ask them not to repeat that experiment. Resolutions of that character have created a new dread in the public mind. They say: 'You can see what it is coming to if that is done.' Then, when the hour for decision arrives, it will be difficult to preserve that atmosphere of calm judgment which is essential if the peace of the world is to be preserved."

While the Prime Minister's inability to make a comprehensive statement on the Russo-Polish situation left several vexed points still outstanding, the fact that the motion for adjournment was so framed as to admit of Parliament being summoned at twenty-four or forty-eight hours' notice found general favor, as did Andrew Bonar Law's definite pledge that so far as the possibility of action against Russia went the decision of the House would be sought before any doubtful question of British obligations was interpreted as a casus belli and before any hostile operations, direct or indirect, were put in hand.

Herbert H. Asquith found little support for his argument that the time had come in Britain to recognize the Soviet Government definitely; for, with the Minsk negotiations apparently at last about to begin and to furnish clear proof of whether the Soviet pledges regarding Polish independence are or are not to be relied upon, there is no reason for precipitancy. That Mr. Lloyd George made no reply to Mr. Asquith on this point caused no surprise, but there was a certain feeling of disappointment that the Premier had nothing further to say on the subject of Anglo-French relations. His speech implied that there would be no swerving from the declared British policy, but the members would have liked to receive an inkling of the reply which had been made by the Premier to the request put in by Kameneff on behalf of the Soviet Government for "a final decision on the British Government's attitude toward General Wrangel." The main point made by Kameneff was that the British Government by arranging armistice negotiations in the Crimea in April last gave Wrangel an opportunity of preparing his military plans, "whereby Wrangel has been enabled to wait for the moment when he has at last received recognition by Great Britain's ally, France."

While Mr. Lloyd George himself said nothing on this point, it was pointed out in the lobbies of the House that the very fact that Great Britain had come near to a breach with France over Wrangel was sufficient answer to the Soviet Government's question.

Mr. Lloyd George's statement was awaited with tense interest; for there existed in the public mind a strong suspicion that the difference between Great Britain and France went deeper than the protagonists of a continued entente between the two countries were willing to admit.

At an early stage of the crisis which followed the French recognition of the Wrangel Government an Englishman closely in touch with international politics advanced the hypothesis that French chauvinism would not become acutely dangerous so long as there was a good understanding between Great Britain and the United States. The same observer yesterday acknowledged that the American support which France appeared to be receiving was calculated to stiffen the French attitude on several questions which in the British view were fraught with dangerous possibilities.

William Adamson, the labor leader, suggested that the American view of the Russian problem was possibly due to dollar-making instincts. In some circles it is more usual to find a belief that the American attitude is the result of the special position of the United States as the country furthest removed from and most independent of Russia, and at the same time as obsessed by fear of the spread of Bolshevism.

Some Americans here point to recent incidents in this country, such as the formation of the Council of Action by the Labor Party, as illustrating the fact that the Bolshevist poison is spreading insidiously throughout the body politic; but there are comparatively few Englishmen who regard these symptoms of disease as alarming. The tendency is to consider them as a passing eruption due to a virus so foreign to the whole British system that the cure can be safely left to the ordinary processes of the political constitution. Whether this view be right or wrong, it seems to be an established fact that the public generally has not been much impressed by labor's claim that it has forced its Russian policy upon the Government.

"COUNCIL OF ACTION" ISSUES NEW APPEAL

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The "Council of Action" of the British Labor Party today, after a long discussion, issued a new manifesto to the workers of Great Britain declaring that the danger of war was not over.

"This," the manifesto said, "is not the time to be deceived by seeming fair words. * * * Why does not the Premier announce the terms on which England will make peace with Russia? * * * Why is the position with regard to the adventurer Wrangel so ambiguous?"

The manifesto demands a full peace, together with a resumption of trading with Russia, and exhorts the workers not to relax their efforts in this direction.

The Labor Council has not yet received any word from William Adamson and Harry Gosling, representatives of the "Council of Action," who went to Paris to confer with the General Labor Federation of France and executives of the Unified Socialist Party.

Delegates Forced to Leave France.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—William Adamson, head of the Labor Party in the British Parliament and leader of the Opposition, and Harry Gosling, leader of the English Transport Workers, representing the Council of Action of the British Labor Party, left for London tonight after conferences with the General Labor Federation of France and executives of the Unified Socialist Party.

They came to Paris for the purpose this morning, but soon after their arrival were requested to leave. Failure to comply with the request, it was announced, would call for their expulsion.

Before their departure the Labor men declared they had accomplished the task for which they came to Paris and that they were satisfied with the agreement reached.

VINDICTIVE RAISED FROM OSTEND CHANNEL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OSTEND, Aug. 16.—H. M. S. Vindictive, famous for the Zeebrugge exploit of April 23, 1918, made her last voyage today. Raised from her grave between the Ostend piers to which she was sent in May, 1918, in order to close the Ostend Harbor to the Germans, the glorious old cruiser was today towed to a position where she will no longer cause difficulty to traffic.

It was a thrilling experience on the Vindictive today when salvage operations made her again a living ship. Her funnels and upper works are gone, but large boilers and air compressors took their place. She had a whole flotilla of lifting craft and salvage vessels in attendance, two being steamers with huge tower arrangements suggesting the American dreadnoughts' masts. These vessels were American salvage craft and very powerful.

Whistle and flag signals throughout the entire salvage flotilla set all engines going full power. After one or two mishaps with snapping hawsers, all were delighted to see the Vindictive moving slowly.

The warship was towed up the harbor, buoyed by huge caissons filled with compressed air. A powerful lifting lighter also was moored to her. As the Vindictive reached her new position a white ensign was run up on her mast and she was dressed in bunting. Sirens and steam whistles on all the ships in the harbor broke out in cheery cock-a-doodle-doos in token of the success, and thousands of people on the piers, the sea front and sands who had watched the operations for hours, together with large numbers in boats, cheered enthusiastically.

The Vindictive has been presented to the Belgian Government, and will remain as a memorial in the spot where she was taken today.

MUTINY ON AMERICAN SHIP.

Hoxie Asks for Help, but Later Reports All Quiet.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 12.—The wireless stations at Lyngby and the Naval Dockyard on Monday evening received a message from the American Steamer Hoxie which stated it was due in Copenhagen Monday night and asked help for a mutiny on board.

The police and naval authorities this morning sent out a hydroairplane to look for the Hoxie. The aviator found the steamer, which is an American coal boat of 7,500 tons, some twenty miles south of Copenhagen, steaming slowly north. The Marine Minister got a new wireless connection with Captain Kampfholdt of the Hoxie who replied that everything was now quiet on board, the ringleader of the mutiny being in irons.

The danger is thus apparently over, but judging from the alarming telegram of last night the situation must have been critical. The ship came through the Kiel Canal but draws too deep to enter Copenhagen from the south. As soon as part of the cargo is discharged on lighters she will enter port.

HARDING TO CLARIFY HIS TREATY ATTITUDE

He Plans to Elaborate Foreign Policy to Indianapolis Visitors on Aug. 28.

THREE SPEAKING DATES SET

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 17.—At the end of an all-day conference of party managers, which sought to co-ordinate up to the first of October all of Senator Harding's speaking subjects and dates both from the front porch and away from Marion, three definite engagements were announced late this afternoon.

Senator Harding will elaborate upon his foreign policies, as outlined in his speech of acceptance, to the Harding and Coolidge Club of Indianapolis, which will make a pilgrimage to the front porch on Aug. 28. An outline of the speech already has been drafted, and the Senator has expressed determination to go into the matter of peace by declaration and negotiation of a new treaty so thoroughly that no doubts can be raised as to where he stands.

One result of today's conference was to hasten the candidate to clarify the treaty issue. Senator Harding presumably had announced he would discuss foreign affairs at the Minnesota State Fair in Minneapolis on Sept. 8, but now, under the new program, this subject has been advanced ten days, and the Senator's speech of Aug. 28 will rank as his most important address of the month.

The two other dates were merely confirmations of Senator Harding's announcement that he would deliver a Labor Day speech in Marion and talk to the Minnesota farmers on Sept. 8. It is believed that the conference struck several snags during the day, for it broke up with the program only partially completed.

Chairman Hays and Senator New, head of the Republican Speakers' Bureau, arrived in Marion with hundreds of appeals from individuals and organizations demanding either front porch dates or the candidate's presence in their localities, but it was a matter solely for Senator Harding, as head of his party, to decide, they said. He listened to suggestions and then vetoed nearly every request for him to leave Marion during the next six weeks.

Strong appeals were made to the Senator for a Labor Day address in some large industrial centre, but he was obdurate and had his way.

"Senator Harding's Labor Day speech will be delivered in Marion," Senator New said. "He desires to be among his own people on that day, among people who know his labor record. That is his purpose, and the judgment of the rest of us."

The Senator's Labor Day address will be delivered to Marion Central Labor Union, consisting of eighteen composite unions," Mr. Hays added.

Senator New, it was learned, made appeals to Senator Harding in behalf of four or five important political localities which have been clamoring for the candidate's appearance, but the dates had not been filled in on the calendar when the conference broke up, with Senator Harding driving Mr. Hays across country to Crestline and a night train for New York.

Seek Subjects for Speeches.

For seven hours Senator Harding, Messrs. Hays, New, Harry Daugherty, Henry C. Wallace and Albert Lasker, in charge of advertising at Republican National Headquarters, had their heads together over a large sheet of cardboard on which were blue-pencilled rectangles for every day from now until the first of October. They discussed political strategy, endeavoring to dovetail together dates, speaking subjects and issues and delegations, localities and their political importance. It was a question of which issue to launch on which political delegation, of which subject should be discussed in which locality and the probable political effect of each decision. While only three important dates were announced today, virtually all of the preliminary work had been accomplished, Senator New insisted, and later dates will be announced after the matter has been referred to National Headquarters and Senator Harding.

Brig. Gen. W. W. Atterbury, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who was in charge of the transportation for the A. E. F., called on Senator Harding today.

Senator Harding denied a rumor that General Atterbury brought him a message from Senator Penrose.

"The world faces a transportation crisis," said General Atterbury. "Since the war began practically nothing has been added to the transportation facilities of the world. Our own transportation situation needs first to be understood and next to be dealt with carefully, sanely and with a statesmanlike comprehension of all the elements involved. In its relation to the political questions of this year, I feel that Senator Harding's candidacy and the program of the Republican Party represent assurance of that careful, considerate and constructive attitude that is absolutely necessary to deal with the problem."

'WHIRLWIND' HARDING TOUR.

Said to Have Been Decided Upon for the Close of the Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—Plans for an intensive campaign for the election of a solid Republican delegation from Pennsylvania to the House of Representatives were discussed today by Senator Penrose and ex-Representative Thomas W. Miller, head of the Speakers' Bureau of the Republican National Committee, who came here from Massachusetts to see the Senator.

The campaign in Pennsylvania took precedence in the discussion. It is understood, however, that the Senator and Mr. Miller exchanged views as to the advisability of Senator Harding's leaving his front porch and going before the country.

It may be said with some degree of certainty that Mr. Harding will continue to address delegations at Marion until pretty late in the campaign, when he will make a whirlwind tour of the largest cities in the country. Meanwhile it is planned to have Republican speakers follow in the wake of the Democratic nominee in the East when Governor Cox swings into this section. Late in the campaign Mr. Harding will speak here.

WEEKS CHIDES ROOSEVELT.

Terms Candidate's Reference to Lodge and Root Impudent.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for Vice President, was taken to task yesterday by ex-Senator John W. Weeks, Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Republican National Committee, for his criticism of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Elihu Root in a speech at Fargo, N. D., on Monday. Mr. Roosevelt grouped Senator Lodge and Mr. Root with Senator Boies Penrose as "old line leaders" who were in control of the Republican National Convention and who do not know the country. Mr. Weeks said:

"This seems to me a little short of impudence, coming from a man who owes his nomination to Tammany Hall and those elements of the Democratic Party in other States which affiliate with Tammany Hall. Certainly Mr. Lodge is one of the leading statesmen of this country, and the same is true of ex-Senator Root, who is now on the other side accomplishing a work for the benefit of mankind and the peace of the world which will be so much more potent than anything that has been done by the present Administration in that particular direction that the result will not be comparable.

"Mr. Roosevelt has been called by his admirers 'a nice young man,' and I have always thought so myself; but that does not license him to sit in judgment on the accomplishments of Mr. Root and Mr. Lodge."

NATHAN STRAUS FOR COX.

Will Give Up Palestine Trip to Take an Active Part in the Campaign.

An indorsement of the Democratic national ticket by Nathan Straus, who has been attending the Zionist Conference at London, was received yesterday by the Democratic National Committee. In a cablegram addressed to Franklin D. Roosevelt, nominee for Vice President, Mr. Straus said:

"The strenuous time of the Zionist International Conference being over, I feel it my first duty and privilege to congratulate you. With Governor Cox and yourself heading the ticket, I know the Democratic chances to be as strong as they could possibly be, and I look confidently for the election of our ticket.

"Instead of going to Palestine, as was my intention, I will return home in September and take an active part in the campaign. I want to help all in my power toward the success of our party."

TENNESSEE DELAYS VOTE ON SUFFRAGE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Miss Alice Paul, head of the National Woman's Party, said tonight that Governor Cox today told Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, political chairman of the Woman's Party, that he was willing to go to Nashville to exert his influence on the Lower House of the Tennessee Legislature to ratify the suffrage amendment. According to the statement issued here, Governor Cox said he would be willing to leave for Nashville this afternoon, immediately after he finished his speech before the Democratic State Convention at Columbus, which would make it possible for him to arrive in Nashville about noon tomorrow.

AS A WOMAN SAW THE TENNESSEE FIGHT

Golden Glow Militants Against Red Rose Antis—Ribbons Everywhere—Refreshments Barred.

By LOUISE GRAHAM.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 17.—Women ratificationists were ordered from the floor of the House this morning before debate began. They sought sanctuary in the galleries, which they had risen betimes to decorate. From the spaces between the Corinthian columns they had hung the yellow satin banners of the State suffrage organizations along with the purple, white and gold colors of the militants.

On each legislator's desk was a spray of golden glow and a sunflower had been tied to the spreadeagle mounting guard above the Speaker's chair. Next to the rostrum was a liberty bell, which it was intended to ring upon the passage of the bill. The old gray Capitol, rising from a hill, much as cathedrals dominate cities of the Old World, was festooned with yellow bunting, which flapped listlessly in the breeze.

Outward peace was in sharp contrast to the maelstrom within the House for the red roses of the antis soon pushed the golden glows out of reach and it was war to the knife. Suffrage ratificationists worked in solid formation. Every legislator who appeared in the second floor corridor was promptly seized and polled. To their white frocks the women working for suffrage had added broad sashes of yellow satin on which "votes for women" was stamped in black. In their turbans were cockades of yellow flowers and some had wreathed broad-brimmed hats with sunset roses. The women anti-ratificationists wore corsage bouquets of jacqueminots and to the lapels of their known friends were pinned red rosebuds.

Enforcement of the rule excluding all but guests of the Speaker from the bar of the House was the first blow to the women. Then death-like stillness fell when W. K. Reddick of Memphis began the argument which would add more than 20,000,000 women to the electorate.

Tennessee women heard Tennessee men extol their unselfishness. They heard themselves flayed for being women. Some men who had voted for Presidential suffrage for women in 1919 were aligned on the other side today. Some speakers said that because the women had fought a good fight and kept the faith, interpreted in terms of bandage rolling, Liberty and War Savings Stamps selling during the war, they were entitled to participate in Government. Others flouted all that and declared their undying belief in State rights, because of which they could not vote to make Tennessee a perfect thirty-six.

"Ours is the great volunteer State," began Joseph Hanover (Democrat, Memphis), the floor leader, who has guided the ratificationists, "and women from East, West, North and South are looking to us to give them political freedom. Tennessee never does things by halves for women. What we do for them as Southern men we should have the privilege of doing for other women that ours may be truly a democracy. Those of us who served overseas know no geographical distinction. I am voting for this because it is a moral question."

"Women are the best thing God ever made," prefaced a legislator in black alpaca, "and I would not pollute them by allowing them to wade through the filthy waters of politics. My wife, nine daughters and eight daughters-in-law think I can represent them at the polls and I guess what's good enough for them will have to be good enough for the rest."

For three hours women were the target for political sharpshooting. In other to keep the session from adjournment the workers for ratification had spent $20 for sandwiches and iced tea. But the doorkeeper was obdurate. The refreshments were not served and the hungry legislators voted to recess until 12:30 (daylight saving time) tomorrow.

Miss Charlomond Williams of Memphis, Vice Chairman of the National Democratic Committee and Chairman of the Women's Steering Committee for both Republicans and Democrats, declares tonight that the lines are holding and that Tennessee will ratify tomorrow. Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton of Warren, Ohio, Vice Chairman of the National Republican Committee, is equally sanguine, while Mrs. Catt maintains her original position, which she states as that the Tennessee men "will not betray the interests of their country by refusing to give women the vote. They have conferred municipal and Presidential suffrage upon Tennessee women and surely they will not withhold from others what they consider good for their own."

Mrs. Catt does not visit the Capitol. She remains in her hotel apartment, which is also her headquarters, and a steady stream of politicians, men and women, flows in and out.

Pressure is being brought to bear upon Senator Harding by Republican women to make another statement tomorrow, again urging the Legislature to act. Governor Cox is in constant communication with Governor A. H. Roberts, who reaffirms his position that he would rather go down in defeat for re-election in November than desert his party platform and promises now. He admits, however, that sometimes friends of a cause can be as harmful as enemies.

"Women want peace and they want votes," declared Mrs. Lydia Wickliffe Holmes of New Orleans, a cousin of Senator Beckham of Kentucky and Chairman of the Louisiana Woman Suffrage Party, when the Session House adjourned without acting. "We want to have the Peace Treaty signed. We are tired of having the men jockey, and the political party which pushes ratification will win at the polls on Nov. 2."

When word was received that North Carolina had defeated suffrage, the Red Rose women laughed. The Golden Glow women all but wept.

Maryland Negro Out for Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 17.—Washnie Hawkins, colored, was nominated here tonight as a candidate for the United States Senate by a committee of negro representatives. He will oppose O. E. Weller, white, the Republican candidate. Hawkins's nomination will be by petition.

NO SEPARATE PEACE, IS COX'S PLEDGE

Constitution, which promised the initiative and referendum, workmen's compensation legislation and other progressive measures, but, after the voters had spoken in favor of it, in September, 1912, had published an editorial in The Marion Star in which the Senator said that the new order of things meant "revolution."

In addition to this, Governor Cox charged, there had been published in the plant owned by Senator Harding at Marion early in 1913, a weekly paper, known as The Ohio Star, which was the organ of special interests which were still attempting to defeat the application of the progressive measures for which the people had voted.

"That it has no pride in its history," said Governor Cox, "there is plenty of evidence. It has no place in public libraries or anywhere else, and you can't find a recorded copy of the paper anywhere now.

"You know; you are the jury," he exclaimed, pointing to the Ohio delegates in the hall. "You know I speak the truth, and it is high time that men shall be known not by their words, but by their performances in the past.

"To the credit of the Legislature," continued Governor Cox, "the legislation was passed. As a result of that experiment I am still a progressive. Senator Harding said it would cause revolution. The plain truth of the matter is that by the processes of evolution we prevented revolution."

Daugherty Assails Senate Group.

M. A. Daugherty, who presided at today's session, held the stage before Governor Cox arrived. He aroused much enthusiasm by his comments on Senator Lodge, Senator Harding and others of the group whom he charged with singing the same song of hate against President Wilson which was sung by the Germans on the banks of the Rhine. He read from editorials which were published in The Marion Star, Harding's newspaper, in August and September, 1912, which referred to Colonel Roosevelt as "an Aaron Burr" and "a Benedict Arnold," and to Senator Hiram W. Johnson as "a braying ass," "a faker" and "a blackguard."

"Now," said Daugherty, "the witness the union of the nominee with the faker and the blackguard."

Upholds the League.

Baker, who followed Governor [illegible] as warmly greeted. He discussed the League of Nations, declaring that this was the hour when the great question of America's relations to the world must be settled.

Secretary Baker made one reference to Senator Harding which caused applause:

"The interpretation of the Chicago platform by Senator Harding," said the Secretary, "is even more obscure than the platform itself.

"History, alas, is full of very much more definite proposals than Senator Harding's. His suggestion is several hundred years behind the progress which international law and diplomacy have already made. If history teaches us anything, it is that nations have constantly indulged in just Senator Harding's formula, and talked of 'understandings' while they were getting ready for war."

"The battle of Ohio is won," he said, "and the battle line of the conflict between progress and reaction is already outside the boundary of the State."

Declares Faith Has Been Kept.

"There is more than one reason why we should at this convention review the governmental transformation in Ohio," said Governor Cox in his speech to the convention. "In large measure it was wrought under Democratic leadership. It was this crusade for human rights which drew me into State affairs, and now that my Gubernatorial service is about to end I am here to look the delegates of this convention as squarely in the face as I did the delegates in the convention in 1912.

"At that time we promised that every pledge in the platform would be written into law, that every mandate expressed by the people through constitutional change would be respected. In laying down the standard of State leadership I beg now to report to you that the faith has been kept. The record may show the effects of human limitations, but there is a happiness which can scarcely be expressed in the thought that the laws which we promised to enact are now a part of the statutes of the State.

"From 1851 to 1912 Ohio has grown from an agricultural into an industrial State. Progress has touched the whole course of our life and every institution save Government. The genius of man was apparent everywhere. Methods of agriculture had been made over. Small groups of manufacturing units had developed into plants employing thousands of men and women. Schools and colleges and church had made this great middle country a paradise.

"But Government had not moved forward a step. The Legislature was without power to provide for new conditions, because of limitations imposed by a constitution that was framed when the finite mind could not forsee what was to come. Injustice was apparent. Powerful interests that were profiting by the existing statutes exerted their influence, political and otherwise, and every attempt to bring about fundamental changes in our charter was unsuccessful throughout the years.

"Meanwhile, unrest developed. Public confidence was shaken. Denunciation of the courts was unmeasured. It did not require a trained legal nor constitutional mind to know that something was radically wrong. Thousands of lawsuits between employer and employe clogged the courts. Capital and labor faced each other with emotions aroused by industrial tragedies. Judicial practices were a reproach. Delays in the law redounded to the advantage of the strong and to the injury of the weaker. Under these unequal conditions, settlements were made under duress.

"Meanwhile, there was developing a massed thought that carried disturbing symptoms. The country should be reminded that it was in our very midst that Colonel Roosevelt, that great American, delivered his first speech in support of his theory that we should go further than recall of the judiciary and establish the ability of recalling the decision of the courts.

"Finally, a majority of our citizenship, without regard to party, in a spirit not to be halted, demanded and procured a Constitutional Convention. As this conference went on reactionary forces, by organized lobby and otherwise, fought for the old order, but they were repulsed at every turn.

"When the proposed changes in the Constitution were submitted for ratification at the polls the army of progress faced the agents of reaction at every voting booth. The paid emissary was there, the politicians who had been rewarded with office remained true to their masters to the last. But the Autumn of that year brought emancipation. Fundamental changes were carried by majorities running as high as 170,000 votes.

Cites Harding as Reactionary Leader.

"On the morning after the election, Warren G. Harding, the reactionary leader, made this announcement:

"'Ohio, by a majority vote, has turned from its old organic law and its safeguards and voted for radicalism. We have ended political conventions and their deliberations. We retain the legislative body simply as a form, and have substituted lawmaking at the ballot box. We have declared property rights subject to the law of those who have none, and opened the way for socialistic rule and reign in municipality and State. The revolution in Ohio dates from Sept. 3d. Our own notion is that the radical victory of Tuesday will be followed by conflict after conflict until a socialistic rule is thoroughly established. Ohio has broken her moorings. The revolution is on.'

"When the present Democratic candidate for President was inaugurated Governor, Jan. 13, 1913, he found on his desk for enforcement and statutory expression the new constitution. It not only gave to the Legislature, in some instances, authority which it did not previously possess, but it issued a positive command to the Legislature to make certain specified changes in the law. You will recall that in our first message to the Assembly we insisted that every mandate must be carried out, and it was.

"We should be reminded that at the very outset we were fought at every step. Paid lobbyists were at work. Emissaries were sent into the communities, where they addressed farmers and business people. Trade bodies in groups from 100 men up presented themselves in the State Capitol, urging delay, restraint and, in fact, submitting the unthinkable proposals that positive mandates should be ignored.

"At times we fought with our backs to the wall. Some thought a reaction had come in public opinion, but our faith in the righteousness of the cause never diminished. It was apparent that the hundreds of thousands who had expressed their will were going about their own business with confidence in the honesty of government, and that the opposition was of financial creation.

Declares Harding Always Opposed.

"An organization was formed by moneyed interests. Unable to get the support of newspapers which refused to advocate the doctrine of resistance, to express public opinion it organized an organ of its own. It had no paid circulation, but was a free paper, mailed to and distributed in the counties. It was published by Mr. Harding and took the name of his own paper, The Ohio Star. At every bend of the road we found him aligned with the opposition. To his credit it must be stated that he believed he was right. He mistook the spirit of the whole movement. It was an orderly process of evolution. He designated it as revolution.

"The point, however, is that he still believes in reaction, and I still believe in progress. He designated it as Socialism. The truth of the matter is that it prevented Socialism. Instead of weakening the force of the Legislature it saved the lawmaking branch.

"In every contest between progress and reaction, whether State or national or international, you will find the elements very much the same. The forward step is always surrounded by articulated misgivings, sincere in some instances, but ordinarily the evidence of selfish desire or political design.

"It required Governmental intervention to allay unrest within the State. The people gave their moral strength to make it possible. The reactionary regarded it as revolution.

Would End International Anarchy.

"Turning from state to world affairs, the progressive would now bring an end to international anarchy. He would reestablish orderly government, he would take from any potentate the facility to declare war over night, he would merge governmental entities into a righteous association. The progressive has faith in the awakened moral sense of civilization. He answers captious objection with an expressed confidence in humanity.

"He would stop the flow of resources to the building of armaments. He would substitute the governmental agencies of humanity and education for the vast arsenals of human destruction. He rejects the creed of selfishness, personal, national or international, and believes that Almighty God intended the influence of moral righteousness should not be fettered by boundary lines. He believes that government should be as human as humanity itself. He learns by experience, and it tells him that evolution is the triumph of today over the mysteries of yesterday and that the divine scheme of things will work out only by our pressing forward, and not going backward."

"I care not where you wage the war in behalf of progress against reaction, you find in the main the same elements year in and year out. It must be more than a coincidence that the forces of progress brought emancipation in Ohio and that the force of progress is now attempting to bring an end to international anarchy in the world.

"As we enter this campaign, there is one thing I want to impress into your memory. I carefully reviewed the platform adopted by the Republicans at Chicago. I studied its principles. I carefully reviewed each section of it. But I know as much about it now as when I started to read it.

"I gave intensive thought also to the acceptance speech made by the Republican candidate, the purpose of which was to interpret the meaning of that historic document, and after long and vigilant labor I found two pronouncements.

"What was the first? It was a statement that staggered the sensibilities of the civilization of the world, the unthinkable, monstrous proposal that in the midst of the uncertainty of the hour a separate peace ought to be made with Germany.

"I want you to go back with me just a year and a half to the time when victory was won; to the time when our boys maintained their vigils on the banks of the Rhine. Standing there in solid formation with 2,000,000 great lads behind them, Germany signed the peace document on the dotted line.

"What has happened in the United States Senate to prevent its acceptance by the upper branch of the American Congress? I need not recall, because every child knows about it. But the soldiers came back home; they were demobilized; they entered into the several walks of life believing that their victory had been complete and that the offending powers had been brought to terms.

"And now, with the armies disbanded, and now, with our military strength no longer holding together, it is proposed by the candidate of the Republican Party that he will prove false to the boys who stood by until peace was made. He will destroy the pact and enter into a new covenant.

Declares Perfidious Act Proposed.

"Six hundred thousand French died at Verdun defending the slogan 'They shall not pass.' More than a million English and Canadians died on the Somme, reforming their broken ranks, and hurling back the challenge 'They shall not pass.' They were possessed of the crusading spirit. They were preserving the democracy of the world, the very Government of the earth, and now another menace is threatened, and it is proposed that some one acting in behalf of 2,000,000 soldiers and 100,000,000 people of this Republic shall perform a perfectly perfidious act.

"Standing at the head of the hosts of the great army which opposes the forces of reaction, standing at the head of the hosts of democracy, at the head of the hosts of progress, at the head of the hundreds of thousands of independents of this country, I give to you this assurance—it is not that they shall not pass—I give the assurance that this dishonorable deed will not be perpetrated, for two very important reasons.

"First, Warren G. Harding will not have the chance to do it, and second, that I will not insult two million soldiers by doing it myself.

"And then, proceeding to the second stage of these proceedings, the Republican candidate says that after he shall have made a separate peace with Germany he will then assemble the conscience of the civilization of the world and form an entirely new relationship. If, for the sake of argument only, we are to assume that a separate peace with Germany were made, I believe that the Government of the United States of America would be so unworthy in the eyes of the nations of the world that none of them would have anything to do with us at all.

Sees Contrast of Promises.

"This one question will remain in the public mind. After all, this is the crux of the whole situation: The Republican candidate and the reactionaries now in control of the Republican Party promise you nothing whatsoever except a proposal which at its best will involve months and probably years of delay.

"We promise you that after the fourth of March, 1921, with the least amount of conversation possible, we will enter into the League of Nations with the world. Our Democratic platform adopted at San Francisco gives us full license and opportunity to enter that League upon terms which will need no defense.

"Our position is not unbending, it is not captious. We proclaim that we will accept any conditions that interpret, that call attention to the limitations of our Constitution, that serve full notice now upon the powers of the earth that we can go so far and no further. In other words, we have the opportunity of concluding this, the greatest movement for righteousness in all the history of the world, and then the loose ends of civilization will be put together. America will proceed upon an era of prosperity and peace without precedent.

"One thing more and I am done. I will address no audience in America this year but what I will puncture the smoke screen of hypocrisy and insincerity which has been raised in order that the reactionaries might creep in behind it and claim their main objective, the spoils of office.

"That smoke screen now is the statement that the League of Nations increases the probability of war. It would have been just as absurd to have said at the time our fathers won their freedom that if you proclaim your independence you are going to have war because you will have to fight to retain it.

Must Act Now, Baker Declares.

After a warm indorsement of Governor Cox as one who would courageously uphold Democratic doctrine as President, Secretary Baker declared that but for the overshadowing issues raised by the war, the creative legislation achieved under the Wilson Administration since 1912 "would stand without parallel and brook no comparison with the work of any other eight years in our history."

Secretary Baker pointed out that the great question of America's relations to the world must be settled now, saying in part:

"New relationships among nations are being settled which exclude us. In a little while the rest of the world will despair of securing our co-operation and will make alliances which will not be dissolved at our request and which will not have been made for our benefit.

"The question to be decided can be stated simply: The Versailles treaty contains provision for a League of Nations to preserve the peace of the world. Are we going to join the League?

"If we do not go into the League of Nations, we must continue to arm. We must build a greater navy; we must keep pace with the improvement in arms, constantly rearming our forces and building up greater reserves of the most modern, ingenious and costly implements of offense and defense. If we are to play a lone hand it must be a strong hand. Competition in armament necessarily means increased outlay on an expanding scale. We will be but one competitor in a universal race for armed supremacy; civilization will impoverish itself preparing for its own destruction.

Secretary Baker compared the Democratic and Republican platforms on the League issue—the vagueness of the one and the clarity of the other—and declared that Senator Harding's interpretation of the Chicago platform was even more elusive than the platform itself. He pointed to history as teaching that nations had constantly talked of such "understandings" as Senator Harding suggested while they were getting ready for war.

The Secretary contended at length that President Wilson's position had been "American throughout." He defended Article X. of the League covenant as an extension of the Monroe Doctrine to the world, quoting ex-President Taft as so declaring.

AUTO CRASH KILLS B. R. T. MAN'S WIFE

H. R. Potts, Assistant Secretary, and Two Others Hurt in Brooklyn Collision.

GINSBERG CHAUFFEUR HELD

Mrs. Lillian Potts was killed, her husband, Harry R. Potts, Assistant Secretary of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, was seriously injured, and two other passengers suffered minor injuries when the limousine in which they were riding collided with a speeding automobile at Clarendon Road and Rogers Avenue, Brooklyn, soon after 9 o'clock last night. Mrs. Potts died of fright, a physician said.

The limousine, owned by Miss Florence Hunt of 3 Virginia Place, Brooklyn, and carrying, besides Mr. and Mrs. Potts, its owner, and Louis Beaudine of 836 Eastern Parkway, and Frank Mathias, the chauffeur, was running west in Clarendon Road. The other car, driven by Harry Senft, a chauffeur, of 1,510 Pitkin Avenue, was running south in Rogers Avenue. Senft carried two men, two women and a baby.

Just before the crash Mrs. Potts was seen by witnesses to rise from her seat in the tonneau of the limousine. There were no marks of injuries on her body when it was removed. The big car was overturned. Mr. Potts's right leg was torn, and his right hip sprained and possibly fractured. Beaudine's right leg, forearm and head were cut. Miss Hunt's injuries were confined to her hands and face and were caused by shattered glass.

Senft was arrested by a motorcycle policeman on a charge of reckless driving, and later was held at the Snyder Avenue Police Station on a technical charge of homicide.

With Beaudine and her chauffeur Miss Hunt called at the Potts home to take Mr. and Mrs. Potts for a drive. They were on their way to one of the beaches when Mathias sighted Sennft's car approaching in Rogers Avenue. Both apparently thought the other would stop. Instead, Sennft drove on, striking the limousine. Sennft was running so fast, witnesses said, that his car went on after it struck the limousine, crossed the sidewalk and stalled in a vacant lot a few hundred feet away.

It was there that Motorcycle Policeman Joseph Dunn of the Snyder Avenue Station found him. Sennft said the car belonged to Abraham Ginsberg of St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, and that he had been ordered to take several friends of Ginsberg for an outing. He denied he was speeding.

The limousine was wrecked. Witnesses told the police they were forced to break open a door and smash the car's windows before they could release the injured persons and remove Mrs. Potts's body. The injured were taken to the Swedish Hospital in an ambulance by Dr. Barney. Potts remained in the hospital. None of the passengers in Sennft's car was injured. They gave their names to the police as Mrs. Elman, 93 Hersel Street, Brooklyn; Mrs. Karp, whose address the police did not obtain, and a Mr. Levy of 1,769 Park Place.

Both chauffeurs were held at the Flatbush police station pending an investigation of the accident, but Mathias was released after witnesses reported to the police.

Jacob Weissman, 13, a newsboy, was killed last night at Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street when he was struck by an automobile truck owned by the Uvalde Asphalt Company, 1 Broadway, and driven by Andrew Regan of 310 West 150th Street. Weissman was thrown several feet into the path of a southbound Amsterdam Avenue surface car. The motorman stopped the car before it reached the boy's body. The lad was dead when an ambulance surgeon arrived. Regan was held at the West 100th Street Police Station on a technical charge of homicide. The Weissman boy's home was at 131 West 101st Street.

for an alleged attack upon a man whose name was not known. Piecing all these bits of information together the bureau at 11 o'clock last night called for the relatives to go to the hospital, where they waited until Cerf had regained consciousness.

Cerf Struck, Say Witnesses.

Calling for a supplementary report from the special patrolman who had made the arrest and Patrolman McKeever of the Old Slip station, the Missing Persons Bureau learned that the patrolmen had in their notebooks the names of several witnesses who alleged that Pincus had struck Cerf and that Cerf had fallen against a pillar. According to the patrolmen, witnesses denied that Cerf had fallen accidentally.

Surgeons at the hospital last night said Mr. Cerf's condition was serious, but they were not willing to say that it was critical. They thought he had a good chance for recovery, although the skull had a split running back from a fracture in the forehead. His scalp was severely lacerated.

According to relatives and members of his office staff, Mr. Cerf is rated as a millionaire, his income running more than $100,000 a year. He came to the city from Texas about eighteen years ago and for many years has been general agent and manager in this city for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark. He is 56 years old, is nearly six feet tall and weighs about 200 pounds.

According to the hospital records, Mr. Cerf was picked up by an ambulance about 10 o'clock in the morning and the arrest was reported by the police as having been made at that time. It was not until 11 o'clock that the Bureau of Missing Persons reported to the relatives that they had found him in the hospital.

The great American public is the testing-jury for the food served at CHILDS.

PONZI SAYS HE LOST HEAVILY BY FORGERY

ALLEN ASKS FOR RECEIVER

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 17.—Charles Ponzi charged today that he had been robbed of thousands of dollars by forgery. He declared that hundreds of his notes had been raised to ten times their face value. He charges that notes for $100 were raised to $1,000 and notes for $50 to $500.

Ponzi asserts that although every precaution was taken to guard against such trickery, such as inscribing the amounts into the notes with check protectors, and that although special care was exercised during the run to prevent such notes being accepted, clever swindlers did in the rush get some of them by. He is unable as yet, he says, to give any accurate estimate of the amount of his loss by this means.

Ponzi also charges that some of his own agents were in on the game and profited to a large extent. One of these agents is now a fugitive from justice.

Ponzi contends that these forgeries to a large extent account for the discrepancy between his estimate of $500,000 liabilities and the estimates of the Federal auditor and State Attorney General Allen. The Federal auditor's figures of $7,000,000 are more than 100 per cent. larger than those of the State Attorney General, who said today that he figures Ponzi's liabilities at $3,000,000, with several hundred letters from creditors yet to be tabulated.

The turning in of notes in person has practically ceased, although the Attorney General believes that there are still several hundred out, held by persons who prefer to pocket their loss rather than admit that they had been gullible enough to go into the scheme.

Seize Wines in Ponzi Home.

Internal Revenue agents raided Ponzi's home in Lexington today and seized some 100 gallons of Italian wines. It was hinted that the raid and seizure were only a pretext for a search for any hidden cash, securities or data that would be valuable in the Government's case against Ponzi. Every nook and corner was gone into, Mrs. Ponzi assisting the officials in every way.

Judge Morton gave a two-hour hearing today to the parties interested in the receivership proceedings.

The State, through Attorney General Allen, moved for a single receiver, Ponzi, through his counsel, asked for three receivers, asserting the possibility of his solvency being established, and desiring that his interests be looked after by one of the receivers. The court barred any suggestion as to the party to be selected as receiver, and took the case of appointment under advisement.

Ponzi's hint at solvency brought hope to some of the investors who did not get out in time. It is understood that it is based on the acknowledgment by the State that his liabilities, including the 50 per cent. interest on notes, are only $3,000,000, which, less the 50 per cent. interest, reduces these liabilities to $2,000,000. Against these figures there is Ponzi's certificate of deposit with the closed Hanover Trust Company for $1,500,000, reduced to $1,000,000 by a $500,000 loan; alleged gilt-edged securities held by Ponzi, estimated by his counsel at $2,500,000; his residence in Lexington and several limousines.

Mrs. Ponzi had her permit to see her husband at the East Cambridge jail revised today to be good for a week. This action is taken to mean that Ponzi has abandoned his fight to get out on bail.

THE PLAY

Heralded by the quite uninspired title of "Spanish Love," a vivid and violent melodrama, which had come from Spain by way of Paris and Times Square, arrived last evening at Maxine Elliott's Theatre, where it proved to be a sumptuously mounted, colorful and almost continuously interesting play. It is a good, old-fashioned, rip-snorting, Spanish Bayard Veillerism, which, after several thousand performances in its native land, has been done into English by the Avery Hopwood Playmaking Factory, with splashes of local coloring by Mary Roberts Rinehart. They appear to have been assigned to the task through no special aptitude for this sort of dramatic fare, but just because they were the authors of "Seven Days," which had made the fame and fortune of the long idle producing firm that this new production brings back to Broadway.

"Spanish Love" is most easily described as a bold bid for the honors won last year by "The Jest," yet the comparison is scarcely a fair one, for there is no point at which that adventure in Florentine melodrama was not on a far higher plane. Still, the two plays are kin of a sort, and it is probable that both the authors and the producers went about their work haunted by the feeling that the two Barrymores ought to be playing it. As it happens, "Spanish Love" is pretty well acted in spots without them—very well acted, indeed, by one William H. Powell, a young newcomer who was graduated from the John Craig stock company in Boston, where so much that is serviceable on Broadway has been licked into shape.

The Spanish atmosphere, created by a lavish use of Spanish music, sweet-voiced chimes, mellow sunlight, castanets, gorgeous shawls and all, is altogether seductive and persuades you to accept as true and natural the hissing hate, the lachrymal love and the panting passion of all that follows in this story of wild courtship and still wilder revenge. It bids the players cut loose from all the restraints that modern plays have taught them and some of them break free as if they had longed for just such freedom all their days in the theatre. This is true in marked degree of Mr. Powell, who has probably been on the stage so short a time that he has never been thoroughly repressed.

It is true, too, though in a less marked degree, of James Rennie, who lounged gruffly into favor last season as the cowboy aviator in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle." He is uncommonly decorative and satisfying as the swashbuckling hero of "Spanish Love," where he postures à la Lou Tellegen, glowers and embraces as if to the manner born.

There are lesser parts well done by Henry Stephenson (whose slight peculiarity of speech has been awaiting all these years for a few Spanish words to fit it), by Russ Whytal, who is more at home in this sort of thing than he was in the Brieux theatre, and by Kenyon Bishop, whose antics suffer only from the fact that what used to be known in the old days as the "comic relief" is methodically turned on like cold water whenever the playwrights feel their stuff getting a bit too hot.

The important rôle of the heroine falls to one Maria Ascarra. Apparently it was assigned to her because of her Spanish blood and appearance. It would have been better to have tried for a first-rate actress, even if she had been born in Chicago and named Mame Gilhooley.

All these join forces in telling the story of the fight, in which the gallant Pencho wounds grievously the rich young Javier, his unfavored rival for the love of Maria del Carmen; of how, to save her lover from the gallows, she agrees to marry Javier, and of how, to save her in turn, the runaway Pencho comes boldly back within reach of law and vengeance. The climax comes in the dim-lit room in Javier's house where the two have agreed to meet and fight it out. They are interrupted by the entrance of Javier's doctor, and from their hiding place the silent two overhear the news that Javier has only a little while left to live. It is the news that robs him of his love and his revenge, for he sees himself as one dead, and he knows that the dead are neither loved nor hated. More telling than all the rest of the play put together is the silent moment at the end, when the flame of all this hatred dies suddenly down and the two men embrace silently before the weaker one slips dying to the floor.

OWEN MOORE FELL IN PLANE

Film Actor Cabled He Was Not Seriously Hurt in 500-Foot Drop.

A cable message received at the offices of the Lewis J. David and Myron Selznick, sons of the head of the corporation, were fellow-passengers and were uninjured.

The message read: "Fell from altitude 500 feet. Badly shaken up, but not seriously injured. Plane completely demolished. Six passengers, no fatalities. Cause, motor trouble."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Earl Carroll, whose authorship of "So Long Letty" some half a dozen seasons ago did not lead any one to suspect that he would some day attempt a romantic fantasy of ancient China, has nevertheless done just that in writing "The Lady of the Lamp," staged—and with no little sumptuousness—last night at the Republic Theatre. It is a vivid and colorful Oriental melodrama, sandwiched between a modern prologue and epilogue, telling a Celestial love story with a good deal of atmosphere, and also with a good deal of thoroughly hopeless Broadway humor.

It is this latter element, cropping up relentlessly whenever the piece threatens really to take hold of one, which serves as a constant reminder that the author was also the playwright in the case of "So Long, Letty." A comedian, for some reason doubtless considered good, has been permitted to wander through the piece, making bad puns and cracking up-to-the-minute jokes. The result is a strangely hybrid work, never quite one thing or the other, now an Oriental tale of considerable fidelity, and next, apparently, a satire on all the Chinese dramas which have come this way of late.

But it is an ambitious work, for all that, and decidedly a step up for Mr. Carroll. The program notes the fact that he is not only the author of the play, but the composer of the incidental music, the designer of the scenery, and the stage director. Of these various jobs he has perhaps been at his happiest in the designing of the scenery, for several majestic pictures are revealed to the eye. A. H. Woods, the producer in the case, has been lavish with costumes, colors, and actors, and the result is a production which frequently takes high rank as spectacle.

Mr. Carroll, for the purpose of his tale, brings an American artist to Chinatown in his prologue, and there introduces him to his first pipe of opium. That which follows is his dream, and in it, as a Chinese Emperor of years ago, he fights for the beautiful Princess against the leader of the wicked Manchus. The Chinese invention of gunpowder is used for a melodramatic complication, and it helps to furnish a rip-roaring, Fred-Stone sort of finish for the second act.

In the dream, of course, the various persons of the prologue appear in altered guise, and upon his awakening there is again the labor of readjustment, together with the discovery that the worshipped Princess exists in the flesh as an American girl.

Of the cast, George Gaul and Henry Herbert succeed best in throwing themselves into the mood of the piece. Mr. Gaul, as the artful Emperor, brings his magnificent voice and manner to bear to excellent advantage and plays a difficult rôle with color and variety. Mr. Herbert, first as a mild-mannered Chinese youth, but later (and particularly) as a malevolent Manchu, gave one of the finest performances of a stage career which lists several distinguished pieces of work.

Eileen Wilson gave a moderately effective performance as the Princess and Robinson Newbold, remembered for his good work in "The Royal Vagabond," had the thankless and impossible rôle of the comedian.

TALES OF RICORO

The way he talked about 'fragrance', 'mellowness' and 'bouquet' actually made me want to smoke.

"Knowing this writer had a box of Guessit Cigars, I sent for him, not only to congratulate him on the copy, but to try one of the cigars that inspired it.

"'It's some cigar that can make a man write stuff like this', I remarked.

"'You bet it is', he agreed, with a twinkle in his eye, as he offered me a rich-looking cigar in the invincible shape.

"'By George!' I exclaimed. 'This is great—great! Well-made, too—and—'. But here, much to my surprise, I saw that the band bore the name 'RICORO'!

"'What's the idea?' I exploded. 'This isn't a Guessit at all—what is it?'

"'It's my inspiration!' he laughed, 'The United sells that size Ricoro at eleven cents.'

* * * *

"I wish I could write a Guessit advertisement as follows: 'Guessit is a wonderful cigar—a marvelous cigar—the next best thing to Ricoro.'"

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Some soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

A good thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses throughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out dust, dirt and dandruff.

KILLED BY SUITOR AFTER FUTILE LEAP

SYRACUSE MAN ESCAPES

Upper East Side Girl and Man Are Wounded by Jealous Lover—Two Other Girls Slashed.

Trying to escape death at the hands of a rejected suitor, Mary Velloto, a 19-year-old Italian girl, who recently arrived in this country, yesterday leaped from a second-story window in the home of her brother, at Lyndhurst, N. J., fell upon a picket fence, freed herself, and then was shot dead as she tried to crawl down a well. She was struck by seven bullets.

Before the girl left Italy she promised to marry Pasquale Melone, who came to this country and bought a small store at Syracuse, N. Y. When Mary reached the home of her brother, Michael, at 237 Naples Avenue, Lyndhurst, a few months ago, Melone renewed his attentions, and, although they were encouraged at first, a quarrel caused the girl to change her mind. She told Melone not to return.

When Melone entered the gate yesterday Mrs. Velloto, sister-in-law of the girl, told her to run, because she feared that Melone had no good intentions in making a visit. Melone drew a pistol as he entered the doorway, pushed Mrs. Velloto aside and ran upstairs. Before Mrs. Velloto could follow she heard a struggle in the upstairs room and saw a falling body flash by the window. In her leap from the second story the girl had misjudged the distance between the fence and the house and fell upon the pickets. Crying for help, she freed herself, and then, as her sister-in-law fought with Melone, crawled to an abandoned well and was raising the cover when Melone started firing. Seven bullets struck the girl in the breast.

Melone ran to a taxicab he had left near a clump of trees about 200 yards from the house. The chauffeur, who had not heard the shots or the girl's cries, started away. He told the police Melone ordered him to drive to the Hudson tubes and then alighted at North Arlington, N. J., and ran into the woods. The police, aided by a small posse, was searching for Melone last night in the thickets and swamps along the Passaic River.

Another shooting, with jealousy as the motive, took place yesterday in East Ninety-fourth Street, near Lexington Avenue, when Joseph Andriano of 557 East Ninety-fourth Street, shot and wounded Pasque Rella and her companion, Ferardo Bennetto. According to the police, Andriano was jealous of the girl and asked her and Bennetto to meet him. After talking to them for a few minutes he drew a pistol and started to shoot. He was attempting to reload the weapon when the police came up. Andriano was held by the police on a charge of felonious assault.

Two other Italian girls who had just arrived in this country were slashed on the neck and shoulders yesterday as they were sleeping in the home of relatives, at 44 Oak Street. Surgeons of the Volunteer Hospital reported to the Oak Street Police Station that the two sisters, Julia and Fenicia Leccadito, were in a serious condition. Relatives said there were three assailants.

"Financial Dementia"

IT'S an old disease but a new name. Old fashioned people have known it for many years as "money madness." It is applied to those who seek abnormal returns for their money—who lack the courage, intelligence and patience required of all those who build lasting fortunes by investing their funds for permanent income, year in and year out.

Ponzi is not the only one affected with "financial dementia." From all parts of the country come schemes which interest speculators by promising fabulous returns. Even some who have had patience all their life are now touched with the poison.

This is the time, as never before, to invest with the old fashioned considerations of safety in view.

We want to inform you about an investment which has prime First Mortgages behind it; has 6% ahead; is Guaranteed as to interest and principal, and from which all elements of speculation are eliminated, as well as the worry and discouragement which inevitably follow speculative schemes.

You cannot afford to be uninformed about this investment. We will send you our booklet without charge or obligation on your part if you will send your name and address to us at once.

WE make a Second Unheard-of Move in the August Furniture Sale—a Four-piece Bedroom Suite of walnut for $195.

We bought 55 for the August Furniture Sale—all of this one model (it is such a good one). The suites have only just arrived. They have joined the upholstered suites and easy chairs we told you of yesterday—at lower prices than we had intended to sell them—because we must ease up the congestion of furniture now rushing in. The price of this bedroom suite is, therefore, thirty per cent. less. It was to have been twenty per cent. less.

It is an ideal suite for an apartment — of walnut, well matched, well put together, well finished. Pulls of drawers are of antique finish brass. The bedstead is full size. Chifforobe has two drawers in the upper cupboard.

The first unheard-of move was the offer of $99,147 of upholstered over-stuffed library and living-room suites for $66,098, and $15,000 of easy chairs, to match, for $10,000—now on sale. Under normal conditions they would be offered with only a ten per cent. reduction.

These low prices may upset the furniture market in New York, but they are only temporary.

SENATOR HARDING'S LOOSE TALK.

Senator HARDING'S deliberate and categorical statement that he intends, if elected President, to make a "complete reversal" of "the present foreign policy" of this Government is an indiscretion more "blazing" than any of Lord SALISBURY'S. No Presidential candidate ever said anything so startling—if it is serious. Doubt about that is all that will save Mr. HARDING. People will say: "Oh, well, "he didn't really mean it. He "couldn't. It was just a mouth-"filling phrase of his, which he will "soon withdraw, or qualify, or ex-"plain away, and the rest of us will "forget it." The question remains, however, whether foreign statesmen will be so ready as good-natured Americans are with excuses for a loose-tongued Republican nominee for the Presidency. If they take his words soberly, they will think it necessary to begin at once to put their relations with the United States upon an entirely different footing. They can hardly be expected, in any event, to be as familiar as we are with the pretty ways of our candidates.

It is probable that what the happy thought Mr. HARDING had in mind was merely to score a partisan point. He had got the idea that President WILSON'S foreign policy was unpopular, and so it occurred to him that it would be good politics to announce that he would "change all that." To the alarming implications of his words he presumably gave no thought at all. If he had stopped to reflect, he would have seen that he was getting himself into a highly awkward position. First of all, what becomes of his promise to be in all things a faithful servant of Congress, particularly of the Senate in foreign affairs? Here he is proposing a bold and amazing international policy and doing it, apparently, out of his own head. The autocratic WILSON never did anything to equal that. Where are those skilled and sagacious advisers without whose sanction Senator HARDING was never going to make a move? A pleasant prospect would be before any man whom he might invite to become Secretary of State, and to whom he would have to write: "By the way, "I shall expect you to reverse the "whole foreign policy of the United "States." Let him propose that to Mr. ROOT or even Senator LODGE, and he would get an answer to make his ears tingle.

A "complete reversal"! Senator HARDING cannot have measured his words. He cannot have paused even a moment to think what they mean. It is a part of the foreign policy of the United States not to recognize the Soviet Government in Russia. The recent proclamation of this policy by the State Department met with wide and hearty approval throughout the country. Republican newspapers all over the land acclaimed it. Does Senator HARDING intend to reverse it? He does, if he means what he says. Also must he mean to withdraw Government approval of the Chinese consortium. That is a part of our foreign policy. Likewise must he intend to disavow President WILSON'S announcement that this country had no territorial ambitions and would never seek to add to its possessions by conquest. That stands, until reversed, as a part of our foreign policy. Does Mr. HARDING propose to tear it up? There is, in fact, no end to the absurdities and follies into which he would run headlong if he were to try to carry out his announced plan. Of course, he would not do it. He would not be allowed to. But what are we to think of a candidate who talks so inconsiderately about the gravest issues affecting the whole world? This is worse than shirt-sleeve diplomacy. It is corner-grocery diplomacy.

It may be said that Senator HARDING was referring only to the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations. In that case, the action decided upon by Mr. OSCAR STRAUS and his associates in the League to Enforce Peace is still more justified and urgent. They are committed in every way to the League of Nations. It is their purpose to find out what are the intentions of Senator HARDING respecting it. And the first thing they ought to do is to put to him direct and searching questions. Does his complete reversal mean the entire undoing of the League? If so, the "sweeping changes" of which he speaks will not be confined to his future course. Thousands of honest Republicans will make a sweeping change in their attitude toward their party and toward Senator HARDING.

A SACRIFICE TO HARMONY.

After the Republican unofficial convention at Saratoga and its "designation" of Judge MILLER as the candidate for Governor, Mr. FRANCIS M. HUGO, Secretary of State, insisted that he was going to take his candidacy for that office into the Republican primary. Petitions, multitudinous with names, were to be filed. The voice of the Republican people was to be heard. Since then the remonstrances of the State and national party leaders have had their effect. At least a surface appearance of harmony must be had. So Mr. HUGO will not invade the primaries. Gracefully and solemnly he sacrifices himself on "the altar of Harmony." Sir ROBERT PEEL, determined to abrogate the Corn Laws, appealed from the Conservative Party, which he had split, to posterity. It is of posterity that Mr. HUGO is thinking—or, at least, talking.

He believes that "the welfare of "future generations depends on the "success of the Republican Party." He won't and nobody should do anything to "jeopardize the success of the party." In no less a chivalrous spirit Charlotte's Werther "for all the "wealth of Indies would do nothing "for to hurt her." It may be suspected that the Republican notables of the State are rather more concerned about the strength and popularity of Governor SMITH than about the welfare of future generations; but Mr. HUGO has shown himself a good party man and a good loser, after reflection, and it may be hoped that he will not have to depend upon posterity for his reward.

The irrepressible Senator THOMPSON still has his falcon eye upon the primaries. Can anything be done to snare him, or are his motions scorned by the Republican chieftains whom he pursues possibly with an effect not quite proportionate to his vehemence? At any rate, Mr. HUGO'S plunge into the sea of harmony is refreshing. What is lovelier than harmony, and who needs it more than our Republican friends? These local applications are salutary, no doubt, but how slight they are in comparison with the wide divisions and irritations, unhealed, unhealable! How shall the Johnsonites and the Borahites sing in tune with the multitudes of League Republicans? How shall the Progressive lambs be made to believe that the reactionary wolves have turned into sheep? How are Independents to be in unison with the triumphant, intolerant old machine?

GERMAN-AMERICAN SHIPPING.

There is something of shock in the announcement of a partnership between the American Ship and Commerce Corporation and the German company which would have been its sharpest competitor but for the war. We must accustom ourselves to such incidents. There are other German companies and American companies in mutual need of such affiliations, and there are competitive companies. Will they fight in the manner of politicians or unite in the manner of those who understand how to combine resources so as to make them more productive? The German manner has been to dominate, rather than to combine, in both politics and trade; but if necessity drives Germans to partnerships, they must needs have a care both in the choice of partners and in subsequent conduct. Weakened Germany has besought capital advances both from England and France and has obtained them. Now she is seeking combinations with us to salvage what is left of her shipping industry. It is a singular combination and will take much thinking over.

Germany cannot long continue to find capital and the beginnings of prosperity in the benevolence of her enemies. She must see the futility of relying upon Russia for present aid. Neither in practice nor in theory is there any hope of such assistance from those who regard LENIN and TROTZKY as apostles of social reform. If Germany or Germans seek any part or lot with Americans, they must turn their backs on such delusions. Germans can have American partnerships on appropriate terms. As they are formed they can be regarded as hostages for repentance, not as the least evidence of American toleration for methods hitherto associated with the German character and acts. The partnership is not to be condemned offhand. It is entitled to consideration on its merits in a financial and business sense. There is no objection to a division of contribution and profits on a fifty-fifty or other proportion. But the condition precedent is that the spirit of the combination must be undiluted Americanism. There is the more reason for saying this because there have not been lacking signs that our shipping adventure has been characterized already by some manifestation of a disposition to conquer success rather than to win it in friendly competition. There has been more talk of retaliation than of reciprocity, and much thought of forcing our way into other trade while expelling others from our trade.

Assuming that the partnership is to be American, there is much to be said in favor of its terms. Each contributes what the other lacks. The retirement of the United States Shipping Board in favor of an American holding company is prudent. That the shipping in the beginning should be mostly America's contribution is necessary, as it will take time for Germans to revive their building. The German company's contribution is what our company lacks—"the pre-war facil-"ities, experience and good-will of "the Hamburg-American Line, which "was the premier steamship com-"pany of the world." Now it finds itself within the breakwater from which foreign ships were to be excluded, according to the policy announced for the Shipping Board. Are favors to be shown to the German-American combination that are to be withheld from any other foreign lines? The services to be established are between American and German ports, with intermediate ports of call, and between Germany and world ports other than American. No specific provision is made for services between American ports and world ports other than German. Each of the two combined companies may have its own agents in the ports of the other and in ports of other countries. There is no necessary reason why such a combination should not be successful, but the draft of the agreement shows that the partners propose to keep a wary eye on each other. Bystanders may be trusted to be equally observant.

MIDSUMMER WAR MEMORIALS.

Whatever the intention of the authorities, Nature is seeing to it that decision as to the war memorial shall not be hurried. Monday's meeting had an attendance of only thirteen, and several of these were not members of the Mayor's Committee, which numbers 250. The result was a field day for that faculty which is sometimes called imagination.

The plea for "a colossal monument in the form of a globe" gives the normal mentality pause. It is to be on an island two miles down the bay, and its diameter is to be something like nine blocks. It is to contain, among other things, an amphitheatre, a music gallery, athletic fields, a dance hall and a skating rink. Though it is to be connected with the adjacent shores by tubes, it is to recognize the claims of the future by having a landing field for aircraft. The cost is to be only $871,000,000. Whatever might be the case with such a "memorial," it must be admitted that the assurance of its proposer has, to quote the Jury of Artists, "the elements of space and solemnity."

In the face of this monumental flight, Mr. HERBERT LAFFERTY evinced no little self-confidence in describing his own suggestion as "a memorial with a kick in it." Rightly perceiving that a closely built city of skyscrapers scarcely lends itself to memorials on the customary scale, he proposes to outbuild Babel. As we are a people of "high ideals and tall structures," our memorial must ascend so high as "not to be dominated by private and commercial" buildings. Apparently it is not to contain a playing field; but it is to have an organ in the loft to dispense sacred music for all pious hearts in Columbus Circle. It is also to have "an amphitheatre in connection with it." To allay local jealousies there is to be a similar skyscraper memorial in each of the sister boroughs. Some little prophetic credit may be claimed for the prediction that a midsummer meeting of the Mayor's Committee could only result in midsummer madness.

One sane observation diversified the meeting. Mr. GEORGE GREY BARNARD braved the heat, humidity and other midsummer phenomena in order to be present. "Nothing is fit to go up in this city," he said, "that is not fit to go up on the battlefields of France." The monument is to be erected to the memory of the dead. The only fitting service it can render to the living is as a reminder, beautiful and compelling, of the heroism and the sacrifice to which the world owes the preservation of its liberties. That, as it happens, is the greatest of all services, next to the one that was rendered in France. Only time and the co-operation of all talents can insure a successful issue.

THE SAME OLD TIRPITZ.

Grand Admiral von TIRPITZ has been writing in the Grenzbote of Berlin his views on German foreign policy of the past, present and future. It should occasion no surprise that the Grand Admiral is convinced that he was always right, is still right and is going to continue to be right; indeed, he insists that if BISMARCK had lived on some years longer BISMARCK would have seen things just as TIRPITZ sees them.

For TIRPITZ England is still the enemy; England was always the enemy. Germany's misfortunes are due to the effort of misguided persons to come to terms with England; and what evidently annoys TIRPITZ is that even now, "in spite of all our expe-"riences during the war, the most "able men among us are always "ready to allow the English to lead "them around by the nose as soon "as they approach us with soft words "or little acts of kindness." Germany should have held to BISMARCK'S policy of friendship with Russia, should have put no obstacles in the way of the march to Constantinople.

> In Russia Bolshevism will sooner or later collapse and the country's natural resources will then make it possible for that nation to regain its old position. It is different in Germany. We lack space and wealth. We have lived, and must live, by work. In order that this work must attain its full value it must be guided by intellect.

Therefore, he continues, let us all stand together against moral deterioration, try to cling to the good old profitable ideals of monarchism, and "seek a solid economic understanding" with the other Continental nations, "whose correlation was fully "recognized by the Englishman "KEYNES." Even America must be forgiven, particularly since "the de-"sire of the American people should "not be confounded with the worn-"out policy of President WILSON."

But things are going badly for the True, the Beautiful and the Good. "Once again England has succeeded "owing to the sheer, incredible stu-"pidity and jealousy of the European "nations, and thanks to the wide "moat which she possesses around "her pirates' nest." What is worse, a good part of Germany is trying to come to terms with England, and it is against their credulity that TIRPITZ growls most ferociously. Perhaps, he says, and only perhaps, England will permit a German revival, "so long as "they believe they can make use of "us as paid slaves." Yet honest, confiding Germans cannot see it.

They do not see that England fans our hatred for France in every sphere, while she herself, with her benevolent puritan mask, remains in the background. It is my firm conviction that we and the Continent of Europe, which has gone down with us, can only recover if we recognize England's cold, egotistical psychology and act accordingly.

Well, it is at any rate a pleasure to hear once more from a gentleman whose views are always entertaining, and who deserves thanks from this country as the real founder of the American merchant marine and joint author with LUDENDORFF of Allied victory.

THE NEW IMMIGRATION.

That the new immigration is bringing more fusible elements to the melting pot than did the inflow before the war is the hopeful showing of current figures. This results from two causes: stricter rules of admission to this country and the coming of a larger proportion of brain workers and skilled laborers to escape the conditions in European countries.

A recent article in the Stockholm Aftonbladet reflects the anxiety which the new selective restrictions here are causing in the lands that formerly contributed immigrants in large numbers. The Swedish correspondent harks back to the corresponding low ebb of the immigration tide during and following the civil war. He ruefully contrasts present American hostility to immigration with the zealous efforts of the old American Immigration Company, beginning in the '70s, to induce immigration from several countries of Europe. His expressed fear is that admission of foreigners to America will become more and more difficult, on account of the belief held by many here that immigration is no longer needed.

It is a striking coincidence that the highest number of immigrants to land at any time since June, 1914, came in during the week of July 11, the date of this Swedish outgiving. Of the 13,161 immigrants landing in that week the majority were Italian and Polish reservists returning after war service. One steamship brought 665 immigrants from Portugal. These, like many recent Spanish immigrants, were attracted to this country by the less unsettled industrial conditions here than in their homelands. During the week of Aug. 8, when the number dropped to 8,706, the arrivals were chiefly Italian reservists returning to their homes and Spanish laborers who went to France during the war to reap the high wages in ammunition factories. That the immigration is now so large is remarkable because of the excessive increase in passenger rates.

Skilled workers are attracted here by the high wages and also by the industrial expansion through American scientific processes. The stupendous development of hydro-electricity, especially in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States, and the application of such power to railroading and other industries, are receiving in Europe the sincere praise of imitation. Several European Governments have sent commissions to study American processes of electrification.

In order to make the most of the new potential citizenship, Americanization must be pitted against the syndicalist and communist influences to which the newcomers are subjected. It is necessary to hold up the hands of the National Americanization Commission, working through the school system and through the patriotic activities of the American Legion. The proposed naturalization legislation will include the compulsory acquirement of English within the probation period, and the power to expel undesirable aliens at any time inside of the present five-year limit, as recommended by the Congressional Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. "The safe-"guard against revolution in Central "Europe is the fact that revolution "offers no prospect of improvement "to desperate men," in the recent words of a writer in La Nuova Antologia of Rome. But workingmen in this country are far from desperate. They will think long before killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Tragedies Few in Baseball.

Everybody who follows the major league baseball games was disturbed by the accident here on Monday when RAY CHAPMAN, shortstop of the Cleveland team, was hit in the head and killed by a pitched ball. A brilliant and popular player, recently married, and one of the most important men in the team now leading the American League, his death seems more tragic to many, doubtless, who never saw him play than would that of scores of other players in his league.

Almost every baseball player of any experience has been "beaned" at one time or another, and now and then somebody is killed in this way. But players and sporting writers of long memories cannot recall that any man was ever killed before in the major leagues. In the average nine-inning game perhaps some two hundred balls are pitched. There are approximately twelve hundred major league games in a year. Nearly a quarter of a million balls pitched up to batters in the course of a big-league season, and this is the first time that a batter has been killed. All in all, baseball is a pretty safe game, despite the legs broken in sliding to base and the occasional blood poisoning from a spike cut. For even when a batter is hit in the head by a pitched ball, usually he has been able to duck or dodge so that it strikes a glancing blow and at a point where the skull is not so thin. CHAPMAN was hit squarely in a weak spot. The fact that most of the deaths from this cause in the game are in amateur and semi-professional circles is no doubt due to the inexperience of young players, who are unable to judge the break of a curve in time to move their heads out of line.

Much has been said of the danger to the Cleveland club's pennant chances from the loss of CHAPMAN. Something might also be said of the disadvantage which the New York club may sustain from the reaction on CARL MAYS, the pitcher who threw the ball. Indeed, it may be conjectured that for some time to come pitchers all through the league will be a little more careful not to graze a batter's head, and that will probably mean more batting.

Language in Its Purity.

One of the British journalists now on tour in Canada urged his brethren of the press to do their best to "keep the English language pure." He was especially strong on the duty of resisting the use of dubious and slangy words of new coinage. Newspapers are commonly blamed for defiling the well of good English, and doubtless have many sins of that kind—and other kinds—to answer for. But their difficulties ought to be considered. It is not simply a question of the forms of speech they themselves employ, but of printing strange locutions as they fall from the lips of others.

Take it in a Presidential campaign, for example. If any of the candidates makes a speech in which queer idioms or grotesque words appear, can the press be blamed for giving a faithful record of the thing said? Then there are the remarks made to candidates as well as by them. An Ohio labor leader has just written to Senator HARDING that the Democrats are trying to "put over a hoodwink" on the workers. We are aware, for we have just looked it up, that there is ancient precedent for making "hoodwink" a noun, but in that usage it has dropped out of modern speech.

New Times Mean New Style.

Writers, whether connected or not with newspapers, cannot be uninfluenced, in the matter of diction, by the form and pressure of their age. And no newspaper could follow today its own style of fifty years ago, if it happened to be alive then. The London Times could not, if it wished—and apparently it does not wish—follow at present all the prescriptions of its famous editor, DELANE. One of them was, according to a contributor of his, the late Warden of Merton, G. C. BRODRICK, that "however trivial or lofty the subject," it should be treated "in good simple English, capable of being translated into Latin prose, without slang and without technicality." It would certainly trouble the omniscient sixth-form schoolboy to attempt that process with a Times editorial attacking LLOYD GEORGE.

A story about DELANE runs to the effect that a new man on his staff once asked him: "Mr. DELANE, how do we say in The Times 'He is a very good fellow'?" The reply was: "We do not say that in The Times in any form."

"Gentleman" in the French Dictionary.

That leisurely and immortal corps of lexicographers, the French Academy, has just ushered into the official French dictionary the word "gentleman." It is to have the "metaphorical and moral sense" of the French word "gentilhomme"; that is the sense of "well-bred, with fine manners," as the "Nouveau Larousse" defines "gentleman." Larousse also includes "gentleman-rider" defined as an "elegant man, who likes to ride horseback," and as a "sportsman who rides horses, and so on."

"Gentilhomme" meant originally a man of noble origin, just as "gentleman" meant a man of gentle birth. "Gentilhomme" applied originally only to such a person, not to one who became noble by holding certain offices or who was ennobled by "letters of the Prince." One curious use of the word was the phrase "Gentilhommes verriers," gentleman glassmakers. Nobles could engage in the manufacture of glass without loss of caste, without contaminating their nobility. It used to be a popular delusion in France that a glassmaker was ennobled by his business. An ennobled plebeian was called "a parchment gentleman." A country gentleman of middling fortune was curiously styled in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries "a hare-gentleman," gentilhomme a lièvre.

Now the grand old name is received into the French Academy; and let us see how it runs its race with its French brothers. Presumably the youngest generation of writers will think much less of it now that it has donned the official uniform.

CREDIT FOR RESERVE ACT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the interest of truth and as a matter of justice toward a much-maligned Administration, I feel it a duty to give the facts in regard to the movement which led to the enactment of the national reserve law.

Notwithstanding the antipathy of party-first Republicans to that measure, a leading paper, blindly attached to Mr. Harding and reactionary politics, recently said that this beneficent piece of legislation originated with the Aldrich Monetary Commission of 1908-12. Without any desire to take credit to myself, the record will show that the framework of the Monetary Commission's bill was introduced by me in 1907.

And I do not forget the attitude of bankers and Republican Senators in regard to it. I was laughed at and guyed by my party colleagues, who scouted the idea of "the Government going into the banking business," for this would be the effect of my bill, they declared. Moreover, out of fully a thousand letters I received from bankers on the subject, according to my present recollection, only one, written by A. Seligman of New York, commended my course.

Senator Aldrich himself, who was Chairman of the Finance Committee, of which I also was a member, was particularly facetious in his allusions to the bill and its fate. It would "make good pigeonhole lining," he said to me.

To my very great surprise, however, within a year thereafter Mr. Aldrich secured authority from Congress and put through an initial appropriation for a monetary commission composed of certain Senators, Representatives and financiers. The Commissioners, with Aldrich as their Chairman, entered upon elaborate plans, traveled in Europe for several months and on their return held extended hearings, with the result that in 1911, I think it was, a bill was brought in for a reserve bank system which was entirely to the liking of the bankers.

The measure did not go to the pigeonhole, but to the Senate calendar, where it awaited a favorable opportunity for consideration. It was still inchoate when Mr. Wilson was elected in 1912.

Fortunately for this country of panics, the first important step of the Wilson Administration in 1913 was the enactment of the national reserve law, but it is as unlike the Monetary Commission's bill as the latter was unlike my own feeble effort in that direction. Nor was the present law at first to the liking of the bankers as a class. The reasons for their dislike are obvious. In time, however, also for obvious reasons, quite a number of them gave it sanction.

The historical facts stated above are susceptible of proof by any one who chooses to consult the Senate files. I am prompted in making this statement by the bald inconsistency of the Republicans of today who criticise the law and yet claim credit for it.

No such distortion of issues would have been tolerated by Nelson W. Aldrich, who was a fearless leader. Were he alive he would courageously point out to the molasses-candy candidate of the Republicans that nothing is to be gained by attempting to confuse the real issues of the campaign.

From my long acquaintance with the late Rhode Island Senator, I have no doubt he would boldly charge the Democrats with responsibility for a law which was not in the interest of "substantial prosperity." And substantial prosperity, in the estimation of my old and greatly admired colleague, was not to be attained if it could not come through the banks, by the banks and for the banks. This was his attitude throughout his long and distinguished career in the Senate. He saw no disaster in policies which openly acknowledged the superior rights of capital as a first consideration. It was not his habit to wait until after election to show his hand.

With Aldrich as the leader of the Senate there would be no "Lodge Reservations" to confuse the public mind in the hope of getting votes. Whatever suited the kind of prosperity he believed in, he would be for it, with malice toward none and without a qualm.

In other words, Aldrich would be against the existing national reserve law and the League of Nations, but his opposition would be devoid of hypocrisy.

Justice to France.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If your highly instructive editorial article, "The Credit of France," could be read by every man and woman of our Republic, then surely justice to France would be rendered by our people. You show clearly that all countries of the world owe to France a debt of gratitude not paid yet. You say: "What France owes the world can be put in figures. What the world owes France is not capable of such calculation." And you remind us that "France spent 30,000,000,000 francs for a cause almost as much the world's, or even ours, as her own." Why then do not we declare to France that we do not want her to pay now, when conditions are unfavorable to her, half of the $500,000,000 loan floated in this country? We should do immediately at least as much to the countrymen of Lafayette. PETER J. POPOFF.

MY PEAR TREES.

And watched with pride to see them grow.
I planted Concord grapes also,
And little plum trees in a row.

My trees have grown—they blossom well,
And every year my wife doth tell
How plums and pears and grapes will swell
Our stock of fruit preserves and jell.

But while my pears are very green,
No larger than a Lima bean,
The passers-by with hunger keen
Begin to pick my pear trees clean.

Each passer-by pulls off a pear,
And when the lower branch is bare
The little boys climb up with care
And pick the ones they find up there.

Sometimes I used to hurry out
And run and wave my arms about
And shake my fist at them and shout—
But lately I have grown too stout.

But next year I shall try a trick.
I'll splash the leaves with whitewash thick,
And post a notice on a stick:
"This fruit has all been sprayed! Don't pick."

I'll post that sign in French and Dutch,
Polish and English, Swede and such.
I'll splash the whitewash very much.

But wife is pessimistic quite:
She says 'twill whet their appetite.

BLAMES BOTH SIDES FOR IRISH PLIGHT

FINDS SECURITY ESSENTIAL

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.
Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—In this series of letters I have tried to present facts such as the average American visitor to Ireland would personally be interested in and would make a mental note of for his own information and to serve as a basis to explain the Irish situation to his friends when he got back home. I have often heard the comment in America that the news sent home consisted too much of Parliamentary speeches and partisan appeals, and that what was needed was a rough outline, by an impartial observer, of the fundamentals. Having given the details in so far as I could gather them in a brief visit, I shall try not to leave the reader in a wilderness of facts and shall finish by giving a summary of the whole position as I saw it.

On both sides there seemed to me to be a mixture of right and wrong. One partisan might say: "Britain has misgoverned Ireland and should not be allowed to continue her misrule. In these days of self-determination the majority of the Irish people are entitled to choose a Government for their country." Abstractly this would, perhaps, be the truth, but certainly not the whole truth. Another partisan might say: "A people who shoot in the back—a community which tolerates such methods—is not fit for self-government. For such people an outwardly tyrannical rule is necessary." That also would, perhaps, be the truth, but certainly not the whole truth.

Let us first apply the good American test of "results" to British rule in Ireland. Judged by results, her rule has been a failure. Britain cannot plead the peculiarities and shortcomings of the Irish race as an excuse for her failure. She has been mistress of the situation for centuries and has had the power to enforce her authority and to apply the necessary remedies. The simple fact is that she has refused to bring to her task the kind of study and effort which the Irish situation called for. Generally speaking, she has ruled all her other colonies and dependencies wisely and well. She has certain formulas that have worked admirably. But these did not suit the case of Ireland. Britain, like Procrustes, had a bed, and it was a good bed. All the rest slept in it very comfortably. When she found that the Irish legs were too long, Procrustes-like, she tried to cut them off to fit the bed. That may be putting the matter rather strongly, but it was something like that.

Irish Problem Neglected.

At all events Ireland was a special problem the solution of which involved the question of British efficiency. Britain declined to bend herself to the task. The opportunity existed, and still exists, to make Ireland one of the greatest of all the British dependencies. But it required a departure from the set principles and rules which were applied to Canada, Australia, India, Egypt and the rest. Britain simply would not take the trouble. She might have won Ireland by studying the people and by trying to understand the possibilities of the country. An intelligent and sustained effort at penetration on industrial lines might have succeeded. A government that was at once just and firm might have brought about ordered conditions. But Britain would never take these measures. Methods which were good enough for other countries were good enough for Ireland. Ulster got along under this Government; why not Leinster, Connaught and Munster?

The characteristic British spirit is one of liberality and generosity, even to the point of laxity, but Britain has no elasticity. If she has made pins two inches long for a century or two, that is the kind of pins people ought to use and no other kind will her manufacturers produce. That was why Germany took the pin trade away from her. And so it has been with regard to British rule of Ireland. It has not been bad in the abstract, but it has not been suited to the Irish character and temperament. Britain has been wonderfully generous in many things. But she has treated Ireland like a child, giving her candy when she cried for it, and at other times ignoring her existence. The Irish have been shrewd in the calculation that the only way to get things out of John Bull was to pound him "good and hard." There was deep incompatibility between the British and Irish to begin with, and the practice of centuries has established contemptuous superiority on one side and bitter hatred on the other. Nothing has been done to break down this temperamental wall, and everything done to make it less surmountable, and hence the worst of all the outbreaks in the whole history of the unhappy relationship.

England is tired of and bored with the whole business. She does not get excited and does not take the situation seriously, not enough so. British phlegm has often proved a life-saver, but it has worked in the reverse way with regard to Ireland. If Britain would only wake up to the danger in Ireland and give to removing it the same planned and sustained effort that she gives to many other solutions, a way would be found to the right kind of Irish settlement. But fundamentally the typical Britisher neither understands nor likes the typical Irishman. There is no desire to persecute or tyrannize over him; the stumbling block is the temperamental antipathy of the two races.

Ireland's Strategic Importance.

If Ireland could be moved to the other side of the Atlantic and either govern herself or be governed by America, England would not greatly mind. But Ireland is a strategic necessity to Britain. As has been said, the British Empire is rather a state of mind than an empire. All but Ireland. The one country absolutely necessary for the integrity of the British Empire happens to be the country in which a large body of the people are bitterly hostile to that Empire. That in itself makes it necessary to keep Ireland in the union. The position of the island as the key of the Atlantic would make the surrender of it by Britain an unthinkable thing, from her standpoint. Without Ireland, and especially with that island in unfriendly hands, Britain would have been at the mercy of Germany in 1914, and would be for all time at the mercy of a future enemy under like circumstances. Rather than put herself in this position, Britain would take any chance—yes, the chance of a war with America.

That is the cherished hope and dream of the Irish who are now in rebellion. We, in America, know how utterly unfounded any such hope is, and in Britain, while there is more anxiety over the American phase of the Irish trouble than any other, there is no real fear of war. But the feeling is nevertheless that if there must be war on such an issue, let it come. Britain will never agree to Irish independence, happen what may. In the meantime it is not extravagant to say that American sympathy and help constitute 50 per cent. of the basis upon which Irish hopes of a republic rest.

As I have indicated, the main responsibility for a dissatisfied and disordered Ireland must be laid at Britain's door. That is, Britain being what she is, a professional ruler of smaller nations, makes herself responsible for results. But when one comes to consider the Irish on their own merits, he must take into account considerations which, though offering no adequate excuse for British failure, must be set down to the discredit of the Irish in any impartial judgment between the two. There are no sufficient reasons for the present rebellion. Some of the methods are abominable. There is not even the excuse of expediency, for, while they may goad the British to new concessions, these methods offend the moral sense of the world and antagonize public opinion in every country.

The effort to overthrow British rule is badly timed, because it follows a record in the war by which all Ireland's friends in America were at least temporarily offended. It comes at a time when it weighs against an attempt in which England is active and potent to set the world on the path of order and prosperity and to make democratic institutions and civilization itself safe against autocracy. There are no fresh deep grievances to stir Ireland to action. On the contrary, that country is relatively rich, partly as the result of shirking her full share in the war against Germany. The ruling power did not resort to drastic action to enforce participation. Ireland during the whole time was enjoying the benefits of the law of 1903 under which the land was being divided up.

Both Sides at Fault.

The British have not measured up to the responsibility imposed upon them as the rulers of Ireland. Judged by the standard of efficiency and "results," British rule has been unsuccessful. The Irish would be entirely justified in proper efforts to gain a greater measure of freedom, and even an effort for an independent republic would command respect and general sympathy if it were lawful, intelligent and persistent. The methods that the Irish have been pursuing in this movement must antagonize fair-minded opinion in the world. There has been terrible bungling in recent years, but not real tyranny on the part of Britain. The Irish methods are not warranted by actual conditions. They may have a good effect in forcing Britain to new concessions, but they tend to compromise the Irish cause at the bar of world opinion and create doubts as to the fitness of Ireland for full self-government.

Indeed, one is often moved to reflect that the Irish, by their extremes, are vindicating the British position, and Britain is helping the movement for an Irish republic by her vacillation and blundering. Britain is neither one thing nor the other—a strict disciplinarian nor an "easy boss," but a mixture of the two.

The rule of violence in Ireland will probably tend to make the Irish people think. It will cause divisions on new lines, particularly the natural line between property owners and non-property owners. The conservatizing influence of distributed wealth will probably become a force in Ireland strong enough to prevent solidarity in any future movement like the present one. This influence is already at work to make a cleavage between the Bolshevist labor union and the general Sinn Fein movement for independence.

With these disintegrating influences at work and the certainty that Britain will never yield to the demand for independence, the outlook is for a compromise within the next few months.

If there were a man on the Irish side who could act for all interests—such a man as O'Connell, the great liberator—the settlement would come quickly, it would give Ireland full self-government in domestic affairs and would be satisfactory to 80 per cent. of Catholic Ireland. Such a settlement would hold for many years, perhaps even be permanent. Ulster could not be included. She would not now accept Dublin rule and cannot be forced to do so. But Ireland will be a unit sooner or later. The silent and irresistible forces of commercial and industrial self-interest will bring the North and South together. The coming together of these two races so different from and complementary to one another, each supplying the qualities that the other lacks, will eventually bring tranquillity, happiness and prosperity to one of the greatest, richest and most attractive islands in the world.

This is the fourth and last of a series of articles by Mr. Grasty on Ireland. The first appeared last Saturday.

JAPAN MAY QUIT SAGHALIEN.

Said to be Influenced by American Protest and Expense of Occupation.

HONOLULU, Aug. 16.—The Japanese Government is considering the withdrawal of troops from Saghalien Island because of the American protest, the heavy financial burden of occupation, and doubt as to the legality of the occupation, according to a Tokio cable dispatch to the Nippu Jiji, a Japanese-language newspaper here.

PEKING, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—The Japanese military authorities at Nikolaievsk, on the left bank of the Amur River in Asiatic Russia, have announced that all Russian fisheries in the estuary of the Amur have been taken under Japanese control, according to a Vladivostok dispatch to the Russian news agency here.

Russians desiring to lease fisheries must comply with Japanese demands, the dispatch quotes the announcement as saying.

SEEKS EDUCATORS FOR PERU

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—An opportunity for American educators to obtain important positions in Peru has been offered by the Peruvian Government through Dr. Harry Irwin Bard, advisor to that Government in educational matters.

Dr. Bard called at the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department today and asked advice and assistance in obtaining the services of about 30 American educational specialists, all men. Fifteen are desired for higher administrative and university positions and fifteen for secondary school work. Liberal salaries, including expenses to and from Peru are offered.

WHISKY SOUVENIRS AT SELWYN THEATRE

Audience Receives "Carstairs Tickles" with Hammerstein's Compliments.

GIRLS MAKE DISTRIBUTION

Shevlin Says It Was a Violation of the Dry Law and Will Investigate Today.

Novelties have been the aim and object of musical comedies all Summer and some successes have already been scored, but the chances are that Arthur Hammerstein achieved the distinction of the season last night at the opening of his show, "Tickle Me," at the Selwyn Theatre. The show went along pleasantly for two-thirds of the evening, with the audience enjoying Tinney's jokes and Tinney himself. In the middle of the second act there came a musical number that started out without warning of anything exceptional. It was by the chorus, led by Miss Marietta O'Brien.

The song was entitled, "We've Got Something," and the girls went on to inform the people in the house that they had something the less favored ones across the footlights would like to have. Then they produced—in a style of a stage magician extracting rabbits from his clothes—cocktail glasses. The audience liked it. It was play-acting; the glasses were empty; but they were properly colored; and the act was a hit.

The girls went on with, "We've Got Something," and produced little flasks from which they pretended to drink. That was carrying the idea further—and the audience still applauded. It was a good "prohibition" act.

Labels Read "Carstairs Whisky."

But that was not the end. The girls left the stage and when they returned to respond to the encore each carried a little basket. They came down from the stage, by steps to the aisles, still singing that they had "something" and began to pass little bottles out among those in the seats. Souvenirs, thought every one, and they were—but the printing on the little ounce bottles read, "Compliments of Arthur Hammerstein. A Tickle from 'Tickle Me.' Carstairs Whisky."

Nobody believed it. It smelled all right and its color was all right. But nobody believed it. Still a few decided to take a chance. They tasted it. More tasted it. Sentences began to go around the house. "By golly, it's the real stuff," "It is," "No?" "Taste it for yourself," "O, Hammerstein wouldn't give out anything that would poison a man," "I sure is," etc.

The consensus was that it was "the real stuff," and it is fair to assume that there were among those present several experts not entirely out of training. The verdict, led by them, seemed to be unanimous. Every one had something on which to base his opinion.

About that time the audience noticed that the girls, still singing, were leaving the stage. Their number was over. Always at first nights there are encores, and there was one now. But it was little more than a first-night recall. The girls came back—and sang some more of their song. They went off again—and were again recalled. They sang again. This went on untill Miss O'Brien stepped out and said:

"That's all there is; there isn't any more."

No Promises for Tonight.

And so ended the act—unless it is followed by various official and otherwise eager investigations today. Concerning tonight's performance—Mr. Hammerstein made no promises. But the Selwyn Theatre last night, when the show was over, had a fragrance that made many think of the places of yesteryear.

Upon his return to the city last night from Washington, where he had been in conference with Commissioner Kramer and other prohibition officials, James Shevlin, Federal Supervising Prohibition Agent, learned of the distribution in the theatre.

"I will hold Mr. Hammerstein strictly accountable for the distribution of whisky," Mr. Shevlin said. "As soon as I get to my office tomorrow morning I will start an investigation. Mr. Hammerstein had no right to have the whisky on the premises to begin with, unless he lived there. And he had no right to transport, sell or give it away.

"Mr. Hammerstein has simply broken the law in giving whisky at his theatre and he must answer for it. There is no official who could have given him a legal permit to hand out the stuff. We will make it decidedly uncomfortable for him. I want to say that any one who employs such tactics will certainly get in wrong."

TINNEY, LIFE OF 'TICKLE ME'

It Has Bright Spots and Solves Problem of Musical Comedy Plot.

TICKLE ME, a musical comedy in two acts and nine scenes. Book and lyrics by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II. and Frank Mandel. Music by Herbert Stothart. Staged by William Collier. Produced under the direction of Arthur Hammerstein. At the Selwyn Theatre.

Principals—Frank Tinney, Louise Allen, Allen Kearns, Vic Casmore, Marguerite Zender, Benjamin Mulvey, William Dorriani, Olga and Mishka, Frances Grant and Ted Wing, Jack Heisler, Marcel Rousseau, Harry Pierce and Tex Cooper.

Frank Tinney and "Tickle Me" came to town last night, stopping at the Selwyn Theatre. They are mentioned separately, because the show is one thing, and Tinney another. Tinney is a more or less integral part of the show, but Frank Tinney is always Frank Tinney, and a musical show is usually a musical show. So they remain distinct.

As to Tinney. He got laughs. He always does. Some of his stuff last night was old, some of it was new, but it all went over—because of Tinney. He appeared first in black-face, but soon discarded it for "straight," and remained so except for a brief bit in which he gave his own idea of a female impersonation. How he said it, more than what he had to say, was, as usual, his drawing card, though some of his lines, too few, really, were laughed at for themselves, as, for example, when he told how he had won the friendship of the Dardenella of India by supplying him with a card index system for his 289 wives.

The show did one thing at the start. It showed how the problem of the musical comedy plot might be solved. Its successive scenes represented a motion picture camera on location." That permitted everybody to go everywhere and do anything, and it was all according to the scenario. The stretching possibilities of scenarios are well known. So there were scenes in New York, on shipboard and in several places in India. One of these proved to be something of a novelty—that of the "Sacred Bath." Most people had an idea that the bathing part of the bath would be incidental, but this was a real soapy affair. The illusion of Niagaras of suds was well done.

While Tinney was the talent of the show, the others did their bits, not amazingly well, but sufficiently to prevent the acts from dragging, except now and then. Louise Allen was sometimes pleasing as Mary Fairbanks, a movie queen, and Vic Casmore, as a director, was tempestuous enough. Dance specialties by Olga and Mishka, Frances Grant and Ted Wing, and members of the chorus seemed the thing for a hot night. Even the exertions of the dancers—and some one said that the Calcutta scene might be called an Indian club dance—did not seem to make them suffer from the heat.

Then, of course, there was the "We've Got Something" number, in which alleged and apparently authentic whisky was passed out among the audience, about which more is said in another column. Incidentally the chorus participated in the show on several occasions, getting chummy with the audience to its obvious enjoyment.

Altogether the crowd seemed to like "Tickle Me." It has nothing startling in the way of scenes or jokes or singing, and at times it does move slowly, but it usually hits a bright spot before it has become really dull—and, of course, there is Frank Tinney.

A petition containing several thousand names of business men and property owners was submitted to Mr. Koons.

The assurance given by Mr. Koons was understood to mean that he was favorable to having a branch Post Office established in Forty-second Street and would co-operate with the association in arrangements for placing it in that location.

FUSION TO DEFEAT SOCIALISTS FAILS

Republicans and Democrats Fear Ousted Assemblymen Will Be Re-elected.

MAY WIN STATE SENATOR

Mr. Abeles's "Dry" Vote Blocks Indorsement — List of Designations.

Attempts at fusion between the Democrats and Republicans against the Socialists in the Third and Fourth Assembly Districts in the Bronx and in the Twenty-third Assembly District in Brooklyn failed yesterday, after an eleventh hour effort to bring about an agreement before the time for filing designating petitions expired at midnight. Fear was expressed by both Democratic and Republican leaders that this failure to effect fusion would result in the re-election of all five of the Socialists expelled from the Assembly last Winter. Fusion was effected in the two Manhattan districts now unrepresented, but these were carried by the Socialist candidates despite fusion last year.

The failure of fusion in the Bronx was caused by the refusal of the Democratic organization leaders to agree to renominate State Senator Peter A. Abeles, Republican, who was elected two years ago in a fusion arrangement by which three Democrats were nominated for the Assembly in strongly Socialistic districts by the Republicans. The Republicans were willing to make the same arrangement this year, but the Democrats, said to have been inspired by brewery interests in the Bronx, refused to accept Senator Abeles because he voted for the ratification of the prohibition amendment.

Think Socialist Senator Possible.

Richard W. Lawrence, Republican County Chairman, attempted to get Arthur H. Murphy, the Bronx Democratic leader, to recede from this position, but all influence failed. As a result the election of a Socialist Senator is believed to be more than a possibility, as Senator Abeles' vote two years ago, running on both the Democratic and Republican tickets, was 23,589, to 14,863 for Esther Friedman, the Socialist nominee.

As matters now stand, Edward Seidl is the only Socialist designated for State Senator in this district. There is a contest between M. Maidwin Fertig and Irving Crane for the Democratic nomination. Senator Abeles is designated for renomination by the Republicans.

Samuel A. Dewitt and Samuel Orr, two of the expelled Socialist Assemblymen, are running for re-election in the Third and Fourth Assembly Districts, respectively, and are believed to be certain of re-election. Although yesterday's designations were for nominations for the general election, they affect the special Assembly elections to be held on Sept. 14, because any fusion, which might have been arranged would have been for both elections.

An attempt to fuse in the Twenty-third Assembly District of Brooklyn to prevent the re-election to the Assembly of Charles B Solomon, Socialist, also failed. Pressure had been brought on the party leaders, but without success. Announcement to this effect was made by William Power, brother of United States Marshal James Power, Democratic leader of the district, who was believed to favor fusion.

Fusion in Manhattan.

Fusion was effected in Manhattan in the Eighth and Seventeenth Assembly Districts against Louis Waldman and August Claessens, the remaining two Socialists, but these were elected against fusion last year.

A more successful fusion against the Socialists was made in the case of Congressional candidates, four in Manhattan being named by the Republicans and Democrats, with an even split between the two parties. The Republicans have indorsed Congressmen Henry M. Goldfogle of the Twelfth and Christopher D. Sullivan of the Thirteenth. In return the Democrats indorsed Nathan D. Perlman, Republican, in the Fourteenth, which has been unrepresented since the election of F. H. LaGuardia as President of the Board of Aldermen, and also indorsed Congressman Isaac Siegel in the Twentieth.

Practically all the members of the Democratic delegation in Congress from New York City are designated for renomination, including Representative Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall, in the Sixteenth. On the Republican side Ogden L. Mills is designated for Congress in the Seventeenth District.

The most important contests in New York County are for the State Senate. In the Fifteenth District Assemblyman William C. Amos filed a petition in opposition to ex-Senator Albert Ottinger, who is the choice of the organization. In the Seventeenth District there is a contest between Assemblyman William W. Pellet of the Tenth Assembly District and ex-Assemblyman Schuyler M. Myer of the Fifteenth.

STATE CANDIDATES FILE THEIR PETITIONS

G. H. Payne Appears as Republican Opponent of Wadsworth —Thompson Opposes Miller.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Designating petitions for all candidates indorsed or suggested at both the Democratic and Republican official State conventions had been filed with the Election Bureau of the Secretary of State's office tonight. The petition of Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor in opposition to Nathan L. Miller, the choice of the convention, was also filed. The Miller petition contained 50,000 signatures, it was stated, and that of Senator Thompson 5,533.

William M. Bennett of New York filed a petition for his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket. Other Republican designations which came as more or less of a surprise were:

Ex-Senator Robert R. Lawson, Brooklyn, for Secretary of State.

Theodore B. Baylor, New York, for State Treasurer.

George Henry Payne of New York filed his petition for the Republican nomination for United States Senator in opposition to Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr.

The petition of Mayor George R. Lunn of Schenectady for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in opposition to Lieutenant Governor Harry C. Walker, who was suggested at the unofficial Democratic convention, was not expected to be filed until a short time before midnight, the final hour for filing designating petitions.

No petition was filed for Francis M. Hugo, for the Republican nomination for Governor. He announced yesterday that he was definitely out of the race.

Harrison Leaves to See Cox.

Mr. McDowell was a member of the Easton Country Club and was active in the civic affairs of Easton.

MEXICO MUST SHOW FAITH BY ACTIONS

Misinterpreting Washington Message, Report Arises That Recognition Is Planned.

STATE OFFICIALS DENY IT

No Assurance of Recognition Will Be Given Until She Redeems Pledges, They Say.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—President Wilson is ready to recognize the present Mexican Government if the latter agrees to the terms set forth in a proposal from Secretary of State Colby on this subject, according to a message sent to President de la Huerta from Fernando Iglesias Calderon, Mexican High Commissioner to the United States, now in the American capital, says The Excelsior today.

Secretary Colby's proposition, according to the newspaper, was:

First—That North American lives and property be respected.

Third—That the Carranza decrees which are found to be confiscatory be abrogated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—An evident error has been made in Mexico City in interpreting a dispatch from Fernando Iglesias Calderon, the Acting Mexican Ambassador in Washington, concerning the measures that must be adopted to obtain recognition of the Government of President de la Huerta by the Government of the United States.

According to a press dispatch from Mexio City, Senor Iglesias Calderon informed his Government that recognition would be given upon Mexico's compliance with conditions set forth by Secretary of State Colby. According to officials of the State Department, no assurance has been given that the United States intends to recognize the de la Huerta Government under any conditions.

This Government has indicated that the Mexican Government, in order to obtain the resumption of diplomatic relations with the United States, must show by performance that it intends to comply with the rules that must be observed by nations in their dealings. It is the purpose of this Government, it was indicated, to wait developments in Mexico before undertaking to consider the matter of recognition.

Doubt Demand Made for Villa.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—Secretary Colby declined today to discuss reports that the State Department, acting on the request of New Mexico State authorities, had entered into negotiations with the Mexican Foreign Office concerning the extradition of Francisco Villa to stand trial for the Columbus raid in 1916.

It was understood, however, that no request for the surrender of Villa had been transmitted to Mexico City.

JAMAICA CALLS OUT TROOPS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Aug. 17.—Soldiers of white and black regiments assisted in policing the city last night.

A section of the discontented policemen, now on strike, want $2.50 per day pay and an old age pension.

Train guards, brakemen and baggagemen have returned to work, the traffic inspector to whom they object, having been removed.

Motormen and conductors of the West India Electric Car Company plan to ask the management for an increase in pay and double pay on public holidays.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—The military was called out today in connection with the general strike of the policemen, and those of the policemen who are refusing to return to their duties are being arrested and placed in cells. The prison wardens also have gone on strike.

The strike fever is spreading in the Island. This is due primarily to the increased cost of living. The Government is apprehensive over the situation and special police have been called out to assist the Civil Government in maintaining law and order.

MANNIX DENOUNCES OFFER.

Calls Proposal to Take His Mother to England Preposterous.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Proposals by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons yesterday that every facility would be given to the mother of Archbishop Mannix of Australia to come to London from Ireland to visit her son were denounced as "preposterous" by the prelate in an interview with The Daily Mail last night.

The Archbishop said his mother could not possibly travel, owing to her great age, no matter how much assistance should be given her. He also denied having said he wished to go to Ireland for personal reasons.

"If I go to Ireland," he declared, "it will be with all the freedom of a free citizen."

The prelate denied rumors that he had been summoned to Rome, and said he adhered to his original intention to go to Rome about Christmas time.

ANCIENT TIBERIAS FOUND.

Ruins of Biblical City Uncovered by Jewish Roadbuilders.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The site of ancient Tiberias is believed to have been unearthed, says a Jerusalem dispatch to The London Times. The discovery of the ruins of the city, which played a notable part in Jewish and Christian history, was made by Jewish workmen who were building a Government road near Tabariyeh, the modern town.

When the remnants of old walls and columns began coming to light the Government immediately stopped the work. The Director of the Department of Antiquities then visited the spot, accompanied by two members of the Jewish Exploration Society. The Society has received permission to conduct further excavations.

SOCIALIST SOCIETY APPEALS

Wants Supreme Court to Review Decree on Scott Nearing Pamphlet.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Supreme Court, in a petition filed today, was asked to review Federal Court decrees rendered in New York convicting the American Socialist Society of obstructing recruiting during the war through the publication of a pamphlet called "The Great Madness."

The organization was fined $3,000, but Scott Nearing, author of the article, was acquitted by the court, which heard his case at the same time.

Italian Dock Strike Ended.

ROME, Aug. 17.—A settlement of the dockworkers' strike, which has embarrassed shipping in many Italian ports during the last week, has been reached through the intervention of the Government, and leaders of the strikers have ordered resumption of work everywhere.

FLOOR COVERING TRADE.

Retailers Are Not Placing Orders as Freely as They Did.

In a letter to members of the National Wholesale Floor Covering Association Thomas A. Fernley, its Secretary, reports that manufacturers say they are making their best efforts to fill business now on their books, but estimate that only from 65 to 70 per cent. of the orders booked will be filled by Sept. 25. These figures, he says, were given presumably on a basis of the opening occurring on Oct. 1, but, inasmuch as indications are to this happening a month later, the delivery of Fall business will no doubt increase in percentage. To this are added the following conclusions:

"There is a uniform report of low stock in the hands of wholesale and retail distributers. In some sections, however, stocks are reported adequate to meet the demand.

"Notwithstanding underproduction by manufacturers, wholesalers report that there is a decided tendency on the part of retailers to hold back and that they are not placing orders as freely as in the past.

"The situation with respect to tapestry, Axminster and velvet rugs appears to be exceptionally strong, with a genuine shortage of this class of merchandise. Wilton rugs are being delivered in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. It would seem that the high prices prevailing in Wiltons have slowed up their sale. Several producers of Wiltons suggest a revision in price, of a moderate character, which in their opinion would be a step in the right direction.

"The subject of opening dates was mentioned and several sellers conceded the fact that an opening immediately after the Presidential election would be preferable to opening Oct. 1 of this year, as an early opening would not appeal to the wholesalers or retailers who desire from now on to act with caution, and a late date would give them this opportunity, as they would have more information before them.

"It is, of course, well known that the raw wool market, as well as the cotton yarn market, is not as strong as it was some time back; manufacturers are able to buy material at less than six months ago, which would be an argument in favor of lower prices. However, there must be taken into consideration the fact that coal has increased in price to $12 or $13 per ton, freight is higher, and the high cost of labor continues.

"The manufacturers say that they desire to avoid asking any higher prices for their goods, and it indicates that they are in harmony with the spirit of the times, which appears to be opposed to higher prices. There is a tendency toward keeping prices firm until there are basic reasons for substantial downward revision in the belief that a slight reduction would only cause hesitancy and possible demoralization.

"Manufacturers who have adhered to specific price schedules for distributers report satisfactory operation of such arrangements, particularly at the present time, believing that the extension of this principle is one which should be favorably considered by other producers."

NEW UNDERWOOD FACTORY.

Typewriter Company Buys Bullard Machine Plant in Bridgeport.

The Underwood Typewriter Company announced yesterday that it had purchased the former plant of the Bullard Machine Tool Company in Bridgeport, Conn., which, after some alterations, will be used for the manufacture of the Underwood standard portable typewriter.

The plant covers nearly a square block in Bridgeport. The Underwood manager expects this acquisition will release a considerable amount of space now utilized for the portable typewriter in the main factory in Hartford. Maximum production of the Underwood standard machine had been reached at the main plant, it is said. The amount involved in the deal was not announced.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Lowers Transcontinental Record by 12 Hours 48 Min. Another Essex Going From New York to San Francisco Broke the Record For That Direction by 22 Hours 13 Min., Completing the Trip In 4 Days 19 Hours 17 Minutes

So Essex Holds the Transcontinental Record Both Ways

Two Essex touring cars, carrying U. S. Mail, each one making the entire trip between San Francisco and New York, have set the time records for their respective directions across the American continent.

And thus comes to Essex another distinction for reliability and endurance.

Except for one airplane record, these two Essex cars have crossed the continent in less time than was ever recorded by any travelling machine. The fastest time possible between San Francisco and New York by train is slightly less than the time taken by the light weight economical Essex. But in the case of the railroad train, many different locomotives are used, each pulling the train only a few hundred miles.

From Cheyenne to Omaha the route taken by the Essex was 43 miles longer than the 550 mile route of the famous Overland Limited yet the Essex time was but one hour longer than the express train time.

The World's Most Coveted Records

From the days of the Prairie Schooner, the Pony Express and the completion of the railroads men have sought to establish new transcontinental time records between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

It has called for the highest development of skill and courage. And it has, as in the case of the motor car, blazed the way to mechanical reliability.

The purpose of this Essex test was to prove its reliability. In the period of 114 hours was crowded more strains, more calls for endurance and mechanical strength than the average owner demands in a life time.

Every requirement of motor car performance was met by these two cars. And the fact that they so consistently met their tasks proves Essex uniformity.

The speeds at which they traveled were not so unusual, for another Essex stock car had on a speedway track gone 3037 miles in 50 hours. But in the transcontinental runs, some 350 cities and towns had to be crossed. Crowded traffic imposed its obstacles to consistent going. Mountain ranges in the East and West with grades such as the average driver never encounters, called for the utmost of hill climbing ability.

Few will ever motor all the way across America and therefore cannot know the extreme varieties of conditions encountered. But let each reader apply to his consideration of what Essex has done, every experience he has ever met in his own driving. It will give some appreciation of Essex reliability.

Light Weight Now Establishes Reliability

How gradual have men come to a realization that a light weight car can also offer reliance and performance.

Essex has led the way for that was its purpose from the very first. Economy is of growing importance. Men want to save in fuel and in first costs. But they want no sacrifice in performance and they demand unquestioned reliability.

Essex offered itself to the public without claim. Now more than 40,000 owners know and praise its worth.

Owner cars that had been driven upwards of 25,000 miles were used in the recent nation wide Essex week to establish reliability, economy, speed and hill climbing records.

To Essex owners the winning of the transcontinental records is not a surprise. But those who do not know Essex performance and reliability must regard that these two trips across the continent are as important in marking mechanical advancement as any similar event in the history of the motor car.

Real Estate Men Discuss Plan to Operate Abandoned Road.

Plans for the reorganization of the defunct New York & North Shore Traction Company, which formerly operated a trolley service between Flushing, Bayside, Douglaston, Port Washington, Roslyn, Mineola, Westbury and Hicksville, were discussed before members of the Long Island Real Estate Board at a special meeting of the association yesterday in the Café Boulevard.

The recent announcement that the entire road would be scrapped aroused local real estate owners and developers to a point where they began to consider the purchase of the road in order to maintain the transit facilities benefiting their various realty holdings. Cars have not been running on the abandoned line since March of this year.

C. Loomis Allen, President of the Syracuse & Suburban Railroad, said that a new investment of $350,000, properly administered, would restore the road to a paying basis within a year. The essential features of his plan were a ten-cent fare in the Queens Borough section of the road, the establishment of a zone system requiring the payment of 3 cents more every three and a third miles outside of Greater New York and the introduction of the one-man car.

The board decided to appoint a special committee to co-operate with other Long Island and Queens organizations in an investigation of the entire transit situation along the North Shore. No action was taken with regard to the proposed purchase of the road from the bondholders.

Plaid Skirts for Sport Wear.

Plaid skirts for women's sport wear are to be as popular this coming season as last. This season will show a greater variety in the plaits. There are skirts with the narrow knife plaiting, others have medium-sized box plaits, and there are, again, the side plaits, stitched close to below the hips. There are many minor changes, little strap and buckle effects, &c. The greater number of the plaids are in combinations of the soft, dull tones.

Clothiers Entertain Tonight.

Full instructions for the entertainment of visiting retailers have been issued by the Clothing Manufacturers' Association of New York. The party will start from the Hotel Brevoort in automobiles at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. The cars will be headed by a platoon of motorcycles and will have the right of way to Brighton Beach. Following dinner at the Shelburne Hotel the guests will go to Steeplechase Park, led by the band from that amusement centre. At midnight the return trip will be made.

Fur Used for Facing Hats.

Among the models designed for late Fall and early Winter are women's hats faced with fur. Brocade is used for the crown and upper part of the brim of several of these designs, and velvet in both brilliant and dark shades is also favored. On one dress hat of black and gold brocade seal is used as a facing. The brim is wide and turns up back and front. Brocade makes the upper side of the brim and the wide full crown. Where the seal facing meets the brocade of the brim brown and white ostrich is placed so that the flues droop over the brim.

A Wrong Impression Created.

Among the clothing manufacturers the opinion is held that the recent utterance of the woolen company head will create another wrong impression about clothing prices. This is that prices are due for a considerable drop this Fall. They believe that what was intended, but only made partially clear, was that Spring clothing sold next Fall by the wholesalers will be lower than now and not the Fall clothing being sold by the retailers. All in all, the manufacturers think the statement was so mixed up that more confusion than now exists will be created in the public mind regarding clothing prices.

Cutlery in Spain.

Before the war Spain was literally flooded with cheap German and Austrian cutlery. Of American products only a well-known brand of safety razor and American made hair clippers were seen. This year, according to the American Cutlery Bureau of Information, the Spanish demand for safety razors has exceeded $100,000, straight razors are being sold in increasing quantities, and sales of table cutlery, hair clippers, shears and other products are very encouraging. This is said to be due as much to the good quality of the American product as to the increasing appreciation of the Spanish customer for that quality.

Gray Goods Market Quiet.

There was no material change in gray goods trading yesterday and the market was very quiet. No interest whatever was displayed in contracts, and the little business that passed was in small spot quantities. Prices showed no change, the chief constructions of printcloths remaining at their previous quotations. Sateens, 4.20-yard goods, sold at 20 cents. In the sheeting division prices quoted were 12½ cents on 5.50s, 13¾ cents on five-yard goods, and 14 cents for 6.70s. Forty-inch combed lawns, 64-80s, 8.50-yard, were sold at 26 cents. If there was any feature to the trade it was the way prices were held with such a quiet demand.

Fur Sales Postponement.

A meeting of the fur interests, comprising retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers and dealers, was held yesterday at the office of Milton Schreiber to discuss the postponement of the October auction sales. Samuel Ullmann of Joseph Ullmann presided. Representatives of the American and Canadian fur auction companies agreed to postpone the October auctions if the London companies would also consent to a postponement. A committee is to be appointed by Mr. Ullmann to take up the matter further. It was the consensus of opinion at the meeting that the postponement of the auctions would be a very beneficial step for the industry.

Confidence Returning in Furs.

According to Samuel Ullmann, who formerly headed the Board of Trade of the Fur Industry, conditions are on the mend that industry. During the last two weeks, he said yesterday, there has been a noticeable increase in confidence. Prices have been materially reduced, and if no unforeseen circumstances intervene he believes that the Fall business in furs ought to be satisfactory. The trade as a whole figures that the worst part of the readjustment has passed and that from now on the situation will become brighter. Mr. Ullmann stated that the only unsettling factor would be the holding of auctions early in the Fall, and the prospect is that these will be postponed.

Good Demand for Baskets.

There is a large and varied demand for baskets of many kinds at the present time. Some of the old-time sources of supply have been closed and others have opened up. There are different varieties of Chinese and Japanese baskets among others, and the Spanish-American countries are sending them. Very large, round, softly woven baskets are popular among the latter. They are light, but strong, have a handle on each side at the top and, where there are open wood fires, they are very attractive for wood baskets. They retail at $2 and $3, and there is a little, long handled hearth broom which is often purchased to go along and which costs a quarter. The baskets are also used for paper and magazines on the piazza or in the living room.

Sashes in Gorgeous Colors.

Sashes in great magnificence are on the market for women's wear this coming season. The strong adjective applies because of the gorgeousness of the colors that are shown and the metal combinations. All combinations of color in the Roman ribbons are used and, contrasting, there are sashes with stripes running lengthwise, like two in some brilliant color combined with three of black. There are also the many-colored silk and metal ribbons, colors and metal being combined so that it is difficult to tell where one begins and the other leaves off. There are also flowered ribbons with the metal threads running through them. All of these in the sashes are fringed at the ends, some of the fringes nearly half a yard in depth and showing all the colors and metal threads of the ribbons of which they are formed. The fringes are knotted several rows deep at the top.

FREIGHT ORDER SUSPENDED.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Interstate Commerce Commission issued an order today suspending from Aug. 18 to Nov. 16, this year, the proposed rules and regulations requiring the prepayment of freight charges on traffic from points in the United States to points in Canada.

The order was issued, the commission says, because it appears that the rights and interests of the shippers are injuriously affected, and for this reason the suspension is ordered pending a hearing and decision by the commission in the matter.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Sales of the J. C. Penney Company, operating 297 stores, were $3,278,342.86 for July this year, compared with $1,863,632.14 for the same month last year, an increase of $1,324,710.72. The six months' sales this year are $5,868,374.11 more than in the same period last year.

With the withdrawal of Adolf Mosbacher, the firm of Mosbacher, Cooperman & Kaufmann, converters in cotton goods, 171-173 Greene Street, has been dissolved. Isidore L. Cooperman and David Kaufmann have acquired the business and will continue it under the firm name of Cooperman & Kaufmann.

DELANEY TO MEDIATE IN B.R.T. DIFFERENCES

MEN MAY ABATE DEMANDS

Garrison Insists Agreement Runs for Thirty Days After Notice Yet to be Given.

Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney, acting on a suggestion of Mayor Hylan, consented yesterday to undertake a settlement of the differences between the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, to avert the threatened strike of the 12,000 employes.

Throughout the day the men were clamorous for action and the leaders had difficulty in making them understand that a strike, before every possible effort was made to avoid it, would cause a loss of public sympathy and doom the move at the outset. Last night it was understood that most of the employes had taken that view and that there was a chance that the association would abate some of its demands. It was believed that Mr. Delaney would effect a conference between the leaders, Receiver Garrison and Federal Judge Mayer.

Judge Mayer received from Mr. Garrison a letter in the morning stating that the present agreement with the employes contained a provision that it should run until Aug. 28 and for thirty days after a notice to terminate it. The letter in part reads:

"By the terms of th eagreement either side, after July 28, could terminate it by giving the other side thirty days' notice. It continues until the expiration of any such notice. As no notice to terminate has been given by either side, there is as yet no period fixed for its terminaton and cannot be until a notice is given by one side or the other."

If this construction of the agreement is accurate the men cannot strike on Aug. 28 without violating the agreement, even if no agreement is effected in the meantime. It was said that if the men violated the agreement injunctions proceedings might be instituted against the officers of the three traction locals.

The consent of Commissioner Delaney to act as a mediator was hailed by both sides. The Mayor's suggestion of Mr. Delaney was made at a conference between the Mayor and a committee of the men, headed by P. J. Shea, organizer and executive member of the association, and James Sheridan, Chairman of Local 018.

Complaint was made by the two labor representatives of the refusal of Judge Mayer on Monday to direct Mr. Garrison to confer with them and his flat statement that he would not permit Mr. Garrison to make any agreement providing for a closed shop. Replying to a question by the Mayor whether it was likely a conference with Mr. Garrison would result in adjusting the differences, the committee said that they thought a conference would result in a new agreement which would be satisfactory all around.

That the Mayor was of the opinion that the men had gone too far in their demands was indicated when he told the committee:

"Don't get yourselves in bad with the public by making demands or requests that the people can't see."

After the talk with the Mayor, Mr. Shea said that no stone would be left unturned to avoid a strike. He said that the unions intended to live up to the agreement notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Garrison had violated it by refusing to confer with the men. Asked if all of the other demands would be waived if the demand for a closed shop was granted, he replied:

"No, they will not. There are other demands equally important as the one for a closed shop. They are the increase in wages, the eight-hour day, and modifications of the merit system. We are ready, however, to arbitrate all of the demands."

Last night Mayor Hylan directed Corporation Counsel John F. O'Brien to attempt to obtain if possible from Justice Cropsey of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn a modification of his order restraining the operation of buses on streets paralleling car tracks.

EVICTION AND CELLS FOR ANGRY TENANTS

ASKS AID OF HOUSE OWNERS

P. J. Ryan Wants Numerous Single Dwellings Remodeled for Two Families.

The household goods and chattels of six tenants of a tenement at 403 Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, landed on the sidewalk and their owners went to the Raymond Street Jail yesterday as the result of an alleged rampage by the enraged tenants last Friday night in which the ice plant of the house was demolished, windows were smashed, railings torn up and the machinery of, a coal pocket wrecked.

On charges of rioting and malicious mischief brought by Rubel Brothers, coal dealers, owners of the building, the six tenants were arraigned yesterday in Jersey Avenue Court before Magistrate Geismar. About the time the Magistrate was fixing their bail Justice George H. Boyce in Brooklyn Municipal Court issued an order for their eviction, effective immediately. He had previously granted the tenants a stay until next April.

Edward A. Richards, President of the East New York Savings Bank and counsel for the owners of the building, told Magistrate Geismar that after the hearing before Justice Boyce last Friday the defendants insulted the janitor and attempted to wreck the building. Their dissatisfaction was no fault of the owners, he said, but grew out of complaints about the ice plant before Rubel Brothers took over the building.

Magistrate Geismar fixed bail at $1,000 in each case. The defendants were unable to find bondsmen and were taken to jail. They were Philip Molofsky, his wife, Minnie; Samuel Beusofsky and his wife, Rose; Mrs. Jennie Dischler and Hyman Chalop. Armed with warrants from Justice Boyce, City Marshal David L. Thomas went to the Blake Avenue tenement with members of his staff and evicted three families, putting their furniture on the sidewalk. Mrs. Hyman Chalop, who gave birth to a child about a week ago, was permitted to remain in the house, but the husband was held by the police.

P. J. Ryan of Ryan & Co., real estate brokers of 142 West 125th Street, in a statement yesterday announced that a number of single family dwelling owners between Fifty-ninth Street and Washington Heights would be invited to make room for other families, thus aiding to relieve the housing situation.

"Relative to the housing situation we wish to call attention to the numerous dwellings located from Fifty-ninth Street to Washington Heights not fully occupied by one family," the statement said. "In a great many instances the owners themselves occupy these dwellings and have considerably more room than is needed.

"We can take, for example, an ordinary three-story and basement dwelling, which usually contains about eleven rooms. The upper story in these houses in a great many cases has an extra bath, making two bathrooms in the entire house. There is also on the upper floor a skylight room, which was originally intended for a maid's room. This skylight room can be made into a small kitchen at a very small expense, and with the bath we find an extra apartment that would accommodate a family of perhaps four people.

"For the benefit of those who would be willing to transform their dwellings into two-family houses we have made arrangements with a reliable contractor to make necessary alterations and accept monthly payments, which would be provided for from the income derived from the extra apartment. This will help a little, and we would be pleased to offer our advice without charge to any one interested."

Mayor Hylan assured a delegation of Brooklynites, headed by Alderman C. W. Dunn, that the city would take a hand if Gravesend Beach bungalow owners lost their Summer homes as a result of a suit pending in the Brooklyn Supreme Court, brought by the Harway Improvement Company, which claims title to the stretch of the beach where the bungalows are located.

In the event of an adverse decision, the Mayor told the delegation, the city would appeal the case. The Mayor said that if after the appeal the case still stood against the owners the bungalows could be re-erected on such city property as would be available in that section.

August Santini, head of Santini Brothers, Inc., van movers and warehousemen, discussed a report yesterday that only about half the licensed van owners of the city would accept contracts for moving on Oct. 1.

"If the report is true, I haven't heard of it, but I certainly don't think the van movers will quit on that day," he said. "Why should they?"

Ten city detectives were placed yesterday on municipal ferryboats, including those running from the Battery to Staten Island and Brooklyn, by Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, with instructions to arrest all violators of regulations against smoking.

Since the fire Aug. 2 on the Erie Railroad ferryboat, Jamestown, which was attributed to careless cigarette smokers, Commissioner Whalen has posted warnings that smoking on ferryboats is restricted to the men's cabins. When his Inspectors reported that the warning was being ignored, the Commissioner decided to prosecute all offenders.

FOUR FIGHTS AHEAD FOR SUPREME BENCH

Sharp Contest in the Primaries Predicted—Non-Partisan Committee Active.

A contest for four of the nine vacancies on the Supreme Court bench of the First Judicial District, composed of Manhattan and the Bronx, was assured last night when the time for filing designating petitions for party nominations expired. Four of the nine Justices, who served full fourteen-year terms—Leonard A. Giegerich, M. Warley Platzek, Charles L. Guy and Mitchell L. Erlanger—were designated by both the Democrats and the Republicans, and were also designated for both party nominations by petitions filed by the Bar Association, which had indorsed them. All are Democrats.

Justice John Ford, a Republican, who failed to obtain the Bar Association indorsement, also was designated for both Democratic and Republican nominations. Justice Peter A. Hendrick, who, like Justice Ford, failed to receive indorsement by the Bar Association, was not a candidate for renomination.

For the four remaining places the Democrats designated Justices Edward J. McGoldrick and William P. Burr, who are sitting by appointment of Governor Smith, and District Attorney Edward Swann of New York County and District Attorney Francis Martin of Bronx County.

The Republicans designated for these four places James O'Malley, formerly Assistant District Attorney, who was defeated for Surrogate last Fall; Isidor Wasservogel, formerly Assistant District Attorney; Robert McC. Marsh and Henry K. Davis. Mr. Davis is from the Bronx and was one of the unsuccessful Republican nominees for Judge of the City Court last year.

Both Democrats and Republicans designated Judges Otto A. Rosalsky and Thomas C. T. Crain of General Sessions, for renomination. Both have the indorsement of the Bar Association.

For Judge of the City Court the Democrats designated Judge Thomas T. Reilly, formerly Major of the 168th Infantry, now holding office by appointment of the Governor. The Republicans designated Gustave Hartman, formerly Justice of the Municipal Court.

Efforts to obtain fusion for the renomination of the sitting Justices of the Supreme Court failed in the Second Judicial District, made up of Kings, Queens, Richmond, Nassau and Suffolk Counties. Justice Walter H. Jaycox of Suffolk has been designated by the Republicans, and Justice Townsend Scudder of Nassau by the Democrats, but the Republicans have failed to designate Justices Joseph Aspinall of Kings and Lester W. Clark of Richmond, whose terms expire. The Non-Partisan Judiciary Committee, of which Edgar M. Cullen, former Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals is Chairman, filed petitions for the nomination of all four sitting Justices by both parties and will make a fight at the primaries for them. A fifth vacancy on the Supreme Court bench in this district is caused by the nomination of Justice Frederick E. Crane by both major parties for the Court of Appeals.

The organization Democratic designations besides Justice Scudder are County Judge Burt J. Humphrey of Queens and United States District Judge Edwin L. Garvin, Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles Druhane and Edward Ward McMahon of Kings. Municipal Court Justice Jacob S. Stahl and George J. S. Dowling of Kings are running independently for Democratic nominations.

The Republican designations in addition to that of Justice Jaycox are Henry S. Pettit of Nassau, Frank S. Gannon of Richmond and Congressman John MacCrate and Municipal Court Justice Charles B. Law of Kings.

STEEL MILLS

We started the construction of a steel mill without a fixed completion date. A neighboring steelmaker started to build a nearly duplicate mill about three weeks earlier, and considered that he could do his work more economically and more quickly with his own construction forces than he could by using an outside construction company.

In spite of the three weeks handicap, our client started producing steel about forty days earlier than his competitor. The estimated earnings of each plant are six to seven thousand dollars a day, which means that our client had earned at least $300,000 before his neighbor had earned a cent. It will be perfectly proper to consider that twenty per cent. of the cost of the plant had been retired by this saving.

RAY CHAPMAN DIES; MAYS EXONERATED

HUNDREDS WEEP AT BIER

MIDNIGHT OPERATION FAILS

The body of Ray Chapman, the Cleveland shortstop, who died early yesterday in St. Lawrence Hospital after being hit in the head by a pitched ball thrown by Carl Mays at the Polo Grounds Monday afternoon, was taken to his home in Cleveland last night. A group of baseball fans stood with bared heads at the Grand Central Terminal as the body was taken through the gates to the train. The ball player's widow, who went with the body, was accompanied by her brother, Daniel Daly of Cleveland; Miss Jane McMahon, a friend; Tris Speaker, manager of the ball club, and Joe Wood, one of the players.

Chapman's death has cast a tragic spell over the baseball fans of the city, and everywhere the accident was the topic of conversation. Chapman was a true sportsman, a skillful player, and one of the most popular men in the major leagues. And this was to have been his last season in professional baseball.

Carl Mays, the New York pitcher, who threw the ball which felled Chapman on Monday, voluntarily went before Assistant District Attorney Joyce and was exonerated of all blame.

The game which was to have been played between Cleveland and New York was put over until Thursday and the players of both clubs joined in mourning.

Cleveland Suppresses Bitterness.

Although there is some bitterness against Mays among some of the Cleveland players, Manager Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Club, in a telephone conversation with Colonel T. L. Huston, part owner of the New York Club, said he and his clubmates would do everything in their power to suppress this feeling.

"It is the duty of all of us," said Speaker, "of all the players, not only for the good of the game, but also out of respect to the poor fellow who was killed, to suppress all bitter feeling. We will do all in our power to avoid aggravating the unfortunate impression in any way."

Chapman died at 4:40 o'clock yesterday morning following an operation performed by Dr. T. M. Merrigan, surgical director of the institution. He was unconscious after he arrived at the hospital.

The operation began at 12:29 o'clock and was completed at 1:44. The blow had caused a depressed fracture in Chapman's head three and a half inches long. Dr. Merrigan removed a piece of skull about an inch and a half square and found the brain had been so severely jarred that blood clots had formed. The shock of the blow had lacerated the brain not only on the left side of the head where the ball struck but also on the right side where the shock of the blow had forced the brain against the skull, Dr. Merrigan said.

Teammates Wait in Hospital.

For a time following the operation Chapman breathed easier and his pulse improved. His teammates who had been waiting anxiously in the hospital were relieved. They went back to their hotel with the hope that the dawn would bring encouraging news. They were notified, instead, of Chapman's death.

This news spread rapidly. Among Chapman's clubmates and among their rivals for the American League pennant alike it caused universal grief. With all the players Chapman was popular. To many of them he had confided his hopes and plans. If Cleveland got into the World's Series this season he would retire from baseball and enter business in Cleveland. He wanted to be with the wife whom he had married only a year ago, and to whom he gave his last unconscious thoughts. As the injured ballplayer was being taken from the clubhouse at the ball park on his way to the hospital he tried to speak to Percy Smallwood, trainer of the Cleveland Club. Before the game the player had placed in the trainer's custody his diamond ring, a gift from his wife. Several times the stricken man tried to say "Ring." But he could not speak. He pointed to his finger. Smallwood then understood and gave him his wife's gift.

Mrs. Chapman had been notified of the accident shortly after it occurred and before it was believed to be so serious.

Wife Is Told of Death.

In response to this message Mrs. Chapman arrived here at 10 A. M., to be at her husband's bedside. She was met at the train by Father Connors, a Philadelphia friend of the ballplayer, who had come to New York immediately on hearing of the accident. Father Connors accompanied Mrs. Chapman to a hotel. There he told her of her husband's death. She fainted.

Chapmans' body was removed in the afternoon to the undertaking establishment of James F. McGowan, 153d Street and Amsterdam Avenue. There is was viewed by hundreds of baseball fans, many of whom had gone to the Polo Grounds expecting to see a game. The players of both the New York and Cleveland teams also viewed the body there. Several completely lost control of their emotions, and at one time there was not a dry eye among the scores of men who thronged the room about the bier.

Mays is greatly shocked over the accident. He said he had tried to be unusually careful this season to avoid just such an accident. Mays said that Chic Fewster was his close friend, and when the Yankee player was seriously injured in the same way last Spring, the horror of the accident made a deep impression on him. Mays believed that one of the reasons for his failure to pitch successfully earlier in the season was due to the fact that he pitched the ball too far away from the batsman because he was nervous at the sticking of the Fewster accident.

Thought Ball Hit Bat.

Mays said he threw a high, fast ball at a time when Chapman was crouched over the plate. He thought the ball hit the handle of Chapman's bat, for he fielded the ball and tossed it to first base. It wasn't until after that, when he saw Umpire Connelly calling to the stands for a physician, that he realized he had hit Chapman in the head.

"Chapman was one of the gamest players and one of the hardest men to pitch to in the league," said Mays. "I always dreaded pitching to him because of his crouching position at the bat."

The pitcher first learned of Chapman's death through a telephone message from a newspaper. He immediately communicated with the District Attorney's office, and visited Assistant District Attorney Joyce of the Homicide Bureau at 1 o'clock.

"It is the most regrettable incident of my baseball career," he said, "and I would give anything if I could undo what has happened. Chapman was a game, splendid fellow." After hearing Mays's version of the accident, the Assistant District Attorney exonerated Mays from all blame, and as far as the office is concerned the case is closed.

Huggins Version of Accident.

Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees believes Chapman's left foot may have caught in the ground in some manner which prevented him from stepping out of the ball's way. Manager Huggins explained that batsmen usually had one foot loose and free at just such moments and Chapman had got out of the way of the same kind of pitched balls before. The fact that he did not move his feet made Manager Huggins believe his spikes might have caught when he tried to duck.

Ray Caldwell, one of the Cleveland pitchers, and a former member of the Yankees, said that, as it looked to him from the Cleveland bench, Chapman ducked his head right into the path of the ball. He said that if he had stood up straight and not attempted to duck, the ball probably would have hit him on the shoulder.

The fatality is expected to have a depressing effect on the Cleveland and New York players. It is feared that it may impair Mays's effectiveness as a pitcher, although he said it would do him no good to brood over something which seemed unavoidable. The Cleveland players are so badly affected by the loss of one of their star players that their chances of winning this year's pennant have received a severe setback. Manager Speaker has no seasoned player to put in the vacant position, and grief among the players over Chapman's death is sure to affect their playing for some time to come.

Flags Ordered at Half-Mast.

When Colonel Huston of the New York Club was asked about the reported action of the Boston and Detroit players to have Mays barred from organized baseball, he said the New York Club viewed the fatality purely as an accident, and he did not care to express an opinion on any action which the players mentioned might anticipate. "If these players, however, do send a petition to the league asking for the removal of Mays, the New York Club will then take action.

President Heydler of the National League yesterday ordered all flags at National League parks at half-mast for a week. Similar action is expected by President Johnson of the American League.

Raymond Chapman was born in McHenry, Ky., Jan. 15, 1891. He had been a member of the Cleveland American League team since Aug. 30, 1912, and was considered one of the best shortstops in the game.

Chapman played his first professional baseball in 1909 with Mount Vernon, Ill. In 1910 he went to Springfield, Ill., and from there to Davenport, Iowa, in the Three I League, where Cleveland first obtained Chapman from Davenport in 1911 and sold him to Toledo in the American Association on option. He was recalled to Cleveland in 1912 and had played in more than 1,000 games in an Indian uniform.

Chapman was one of the fastest men in baseball. On Sept. 27, 1917, Tim Murnane Day at Boston, he won a loving cup for the fastest time in circling the bases, doing it in fourteen seconds.

In 1917 he broke all major league sacrifice hit records with a total of sixty-seven and also led the American League in sacrifices in the following two years.

DISCUSS PLAN TO BAR MAYS.

Boston-Detroit Teams Put Action Up to Speaker—Strike Proposed.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—A decision to consult Manager Speaker of the Cleveland Americans before taking any action toward asking that Carl Mays, pitcher of the New York team, be barred from further participation in organized baseball, was reached by members of the Boston and Detroit teams after a meeting today. Several of the players expressed the opinion that some move of this kind should be made as a result of the death of Ray Chapman of Cleveland, who was hit by a ball pitched by Mays yesterday.

Shortstop Bush of the Detroit team announced that he was prepared to volunteer his services to the Cleveland club for the rest of the season if sanction of the League officials could be obtained. Sentiment among his fellow players indicated that no opposition to such an arrangement was probable from members of his own club.

Members of the Boston Club who were team mates of Mays until the latter deserted the club prior to his sale to New York last year said they felt certain the Detroit players would join in any action that might be decided on.

The players held a meeting at the clubhouse before taking the field this afternoon. The petition was discussed, as was the proposal to refuse to play in any game in which Mays took part. It was said that the players were agreed that action of some kind should be taken by them, but at the suggestion of some of the cooler heads it was decided to ask Manager Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Club for a statement on the fatal accident and on the action proposed.

Mays has been a storm centre of baseball controversy for years, first because of his close pitching, as a result of which players frequently complained that he had tried to "dust them off," and later, when the deal between the Boston and New York Clubs, by which he was transferred, precipitated a factional fight among club owners and President Johnson which threatened to disrupt the league.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—A suggestion that players of the American League baseball clubs "strike" against any further participation by Pitcher Carl Mays of the New York Americans in league contests was made today by St. Louis players, who joined members of the Washington team in informal meetings to discuss the death of Ray Chapman. Washington players took no action pending a decision by the league authorities as to their course.

St. Louis players were said to have favored a general appeal to all others in the league to refuse to play in any game where Mays was included.

Mayor Calls Upon Fans to Raise Fund to Honor Chapman.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 17.—All Cleveland baseball fans are stunned and mourning today over the death of Ray Chapman of the Cleveland team, the greatest shortstop that ever wore a Cleveland uniform and one of the most popular players in the country.

Mayor W. S. Fitzgerald today issued a proclamation calling upon Cleveland sport lovers to raise a Ray Chapman memorial fund to erect a suitable memorial to be placed at League Park. The Mayor also suggests that Sept. 3, the day the team returns home, be made a Ray Chapman memorial day.

A newspaper has started a flower from a fan fund, suggesting that men, women and children contribute 10 cents each to pay for one flower to go into an immense floral offering at Chapman's funeral.

25 FIREMEN DROP AMID SMOKE; 1 DIES

BROKEN GLASS CUTS MANY

Twenty-five firemen, fighting desperately in a smoke-filled cellare to subdue a stubborn fire at 48-50 West Fourteenth Street last night, were overcome by poisonous fumes from burning celluloid and paper, part of the stock of a 5 and 10 cent store. One of them—a probationary fireman—died on the sidewalk in front of the building as physicians were working on him with a pulmotor.

Groping in the darkness of the cellar, which the light from a big searchlight could barely penetrate, and working knee-deep in water, the firemen stuck to their task until the poisonous smoke had filled their lungs. Then they staggered out to the sidewalk for a breath of fresh air. Scores of them, after a few minutes outside, returned to the cellar, but others, many of whom were revived only with a pulmotor's aid, were treated and sent to quarters. Many of the firemen, feeling their way in the dark, cut themselves on the shattered panes of glass partitions.

So greatly was the force depleted that fresh units had to be called and before the fire was under control—three hours and a half after it was discovered—four alarms had been sounded and fifteen engine companies, four trucks and two water towers had been called, under the command of two Deputy Chiefs and four Battalion Chiefs, with Deputy Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin in charge and Commissioner Thomas F. Drennan watching the operations.

Pulmotor Proves Futile.

Probationary Fireman Dennis Donovan of Engine Company 20 was one of the first to be overcome by a blast of smoke which drove all of the firemen from the cellar. Donovan was missed immediately and Charles Costello and Frank McGrath volunteered to go into the cellar and bring him out. He was unconscious when he reached the sidewalk and Dr. Henry Archer, honorary surgeon of the Fire Department, and Drs. Timmoney and Kelly of St. Vincent's Hospital worked over him for nearly an hour with a pulmotor, hoping to revive him, but they were unsuccessful. Donovan was a brother of Chief Donovan of Brooklyn, who was notified.

The fire started in the basement of the building, a four-story brick structure, occupied by the Grand Five and Ten Cent Store, shortly after 6 o'clock, when the store had closed its doors. Dense volumes of smoke poured from the cellar windows, but the fumes soon cleared away as the firemen started to work. Suddenly, after the firemen had been fighting the blaze for about thirty minutes, a fresh cloud of smoke arose and drove out the firemen. Several of them dropped unconscious and were carried to the street by their comrades.

Ambulances from St. Vincent's and Bellevue Hospitals were called, and upon the arrival of Dr. Archer a restaurant across the street run by E. A. Lutz was turned into a hospital, where cuts and bruises were treated. Several of the officers, including two battalion chiefs, were among those overcome and cut by glass.

The example of Jack Falls of Truck Company 12, who was overcome three times, but continued to go back into the smoke-filled building, was followed by several of the firemen. Like Falls, they finally had to be ordered to quarters.

Physicians Toil in Shirt Sleeves.

Drs. Archer, Timmoney and Kelly worked in their shirt sleeves on the sidewalk over the unconscious forms of several of the men, and in many cases the pulmotors were used. One of the last of the firemen to be overcome was George Bauer, Chief of the Seventh Battalion. Deputy Chief Martin finally ordered the men from the cellar and attempted to check the blaze by sending lines through the windows leading into the basement. Later fire fighters equipped with gas masks and oxygen tanks were sent into the cellar. It was nearly 10 o'clock before the fire was under control.

The blaze was confined to the cellar and first floor of the building, which extends through to 953 West Thirteenth Street. The upper floors are occupied by R. Smith & Co., dealers in women's apparel. The rear section of the structure is occupied by ten firms.

Commissioner Drennan paid a tribute to the work of Dr. Archer and also that of Honorary Chief Edward Kenny of the Edison Company. Mr. Kenny has a searchlight apparatus, mounted on a motor car, which he brought to the fire and turned into the cellar. Among the volunteers was George D. Martin, son of "Smoky Joe," who did valiant work with a pulmotor.

Donovan, the fireman who died from the effects of the smoke, was appointed to the Fire Department on March 3 and was assigned to active duty from the training school on June 3. The last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered to him by Rev. Father Boylan of the Holy Cross Church, who with Rev. James Gillespie of St. Francis Xaviers's Church, administered rites to all of the overcome firemen.

COUSIN, 74, PLANS SUIT TO BREAK SEARLES WILL

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 17.—According to word received here today Dennis Marr, 74 years old, of Mechanics Falls, Me., is determined to fight for a share of the $50,000,000 estate of Edward F. Searles. Marr says he is an heir and has retained D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, Me., to look after his interests.

Marr says his mother, Sally Searles Marr, was a sister of Searles's father, John Searles, and that he has a brother, Alonzo Marr, living in Durham, Me.

Dr. Henry P. Dearborn of 33 Prospect Street, Methuen, one of the witnesses to the Searles' will, said Searles had been planning a new will for some time.

"I had been visiting Mr. Searles daily for a month previous to the day on which the will was made. On July 24 I happened to be making my call and was asked to sign the will as a witness, which I did. I am not beneficiary under the terms of the will, and witnessed the document simply as a favor to Mr. Searles, and at his request.

"Mr. Delafield of New York, the lawyer who had drafted the will, was there on that day. It simply happened that I called when the paper was ready for signature. Mr. Searles had been ill for some time, but his condition was no worse on July 24 than it had been."

Milk Price to Rise Again Next Month Because of Increase in Freight Rates

The price of Grade B milk will be increased at least a cent a quart, possibly 2 cents, in September, because of the 20 per cent. increase in freight rates, the increase to the dairymen and other expenses of distribution. A representative of the Borden's Farm Products Company said the increased cost to the distributer would be at least three-quarters of a cent a quart. A representative of Sheffield Farms Products Company said the increase would be 1 to 2 cents. He intimated the consumer would have to pay 19 cents a quart instead of 17 cents, as at present.

D. S. Horton, Secretary of the Sheffield Farms Products Company, said New York City is using about 300,000 quarts more than at this time last year, because of hot weather. "The hot weather," said Mr. Horton, "works both ways. It decreases the production and increases the consumption." He said that ten days ago there was plenty of milk available from the usual sources to supply all the requirements of New York City and the adjacent territory, but that because of hot weather the cows have failed to produce the usual quantity and the consumption has increased, with the result that the company has been forced to go outside of the regular producing territory and pay prices for milk greatly in excess of the contract price. Mr. Horton said the daily consumption in the Metropolitan district now is 2,250,000 to 2,300,000 quarts.

H. A. Cronk, Vice President of the Borden's Farm Products Company, said he considered the outlook fairly encouraging. He indicated the increase in milk prices in September would be only a cent a quart over the August price. He said that the contemplated increase of 20 per cent. in freight rates on milk would mean an increase of one-fourth to one-third of a cent a quart to the distributer.

"The railroads are entitled to the increase in freight rates," Mr. Cronk said, "and the public is also entitled to know just how it will be affected by the increase.

"It appears, from our careful estimates of cost, that the milk distributers are to receive a very heavy penalty in the increase. The Borden's Products Company alone will be assessed between $750,000 and $1,000,000 a year by the proposed schedule applied to milk transportation.

"Figured on each quart, it is estimated that between one-quarter and one-third of a cent would be added to the cost to the distributing company. This is not sufficient by itself to materially affect the price of milk to the public, but, taken in conjunction with other added charges, such as increases paid to the farmers for raw milk, it may force a change in the present price schedule. The September price to the farmer will be 30 cents a hundred pounds, containing forty-six and one-half quarts, more than the August prices."

STORM STAMPEDES CONEY ISLAND CROWD

All day the B. R. T. had been piling them onto the island, and last night shortly before 8 o'clock Coney almost approximated the every Sunday dream of the press agent, "a record crowd." The sandy beach held thousands, the shows were turning them away, inches were at a premium along Surf Avenue, and the hot-dog venders were figuring out the upholstering for their next Rolls-Royce.

Everybody was happy, everybody was cool; nobody was paying attention to the sky. If somebody had been studying the upper reaches, that somebody would have observed a storm bearing down, a big chunk of blackness getting ready to drop all it had squarely on the island.

Just after 8 o'clock, the biggest electrical and rain storm in recent years came along. The rain came down as near solidity as rain ever got; there was no preliminary sprinkle—it all came down at once. There was a wild scramble for cover and then all hands decided to go home at once, and they made for the island's four getaway points.

Rush for the Terminals.

Pretty soon the terminals began to bulge with pushing, struggling folk, women and children largely, and Captain Byron R. Sackett over at the police station sent twenty-five men to each of the stations. They got order after a bit, and the rain kept coming down all the time.

Soon the sewers began to apply union regulations and the streets to become brooks. Surf Avenue ceased to be a barkers' paradise when three inches of water gurgled its entire length, and in the terminals the policeman's lot was anything but a happy one—what with chasing intinerants who attempted to ply a thriving trade carrying folks "pigback" across the lakelike streets.

After a brave attempt the island's trolley cars finally gave up, and for an hour or so not a line about the island turned heid true. Just as they got going and it looked as if the worst had passed, the lightning got its cue. The series of glaring bands hopping across the sky had only seconds between them, and then the bolts took to landing.

The first hit came to the two-story frame building at 2,029 Surf Avenue, occupied by Dr. Benjamin Nausbaum. The lightning shot through the roof and started a fire on the second floor. But the teeming rain soon put that out. Another bolt cracked the telegraph pole at Surf Avenue and West Twenty-fourth Street, and the rain put that little blaze out, too.

Bolt Dislocates Man's Arm.

The third bolt caused a curious accident. John Green of Linden Court, a part of Brighton-by-the-Sea, a bungalow colony, was turning into Neptune Avenue from Ocean Parkway, when the bolt crashed down on the roof of his touring car. It shot straight down into the car's machinery, following its mediums of conduction to the steering wheel. Mr. Green's left hand was on the wheel and the blow dislocated his arm at the shoulder socket. He managed to halt his machine and friends hurried him to the Coney Island Hospital, where Dr. Richardson reset the arm.

Before traveling down to Coney the storm passed over Staten Island, and for several hours after its passage the island was in total darkness, due to all electric current being turned off as a safety measure. Lightning set fire to a barn owned by Henry Adams in Appleby Avenue, South Beach, burning it to the ground. No fatalities were reported.

The rainfall was exceedingly heavy and streets and cellars were flooded. In several places along the bayfront in St. George and Tompkinsville water was reported to be several feet deep. In several movie houses water came into the theatres, and the patrons, already victims of the banished electric current, passed their dark vigil with their feet in inches of water.

BOMB IRISH TOWN TO AVENGE MURDER

BOYCOTT OF ULSTER URGED

BELFAST, Ireland, Aug. 17.—The town of Templemore, County Tipperary, underwent a grim ordeal of reprisal last night following the murder of District Inspector Wilson, according to a press dispatch received here today.

The police and military turned out to avenge Inspector Wilson and with bombs and bullets speedily cleared the streets. The Town Hall and several shops were wrecked. The disorders lasted several hours.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—While the military were searching a house at Dorrygallon, near Kanturk, County Cork, yesterday two men occupants of the building fired on the soldiers. The latter returned the fire, killing one of their assailants and dangerously wounding the other, it was officially stated today.

Government troops are accountable for the death of Thomas Farrell, a boy who was shot and killed after curfew on the night of Aug. 10 during the celebration here of the expected arrival of Archbishop Mannix, was the decision of a Coroner's Jury today.

The verdict states:

"The deceased died of shock and hemorrhage through bullets fired from the guns of military without justification. We strongly condemn the action of the military in empowering youths to endanger the lives of citizens, and record our deepest sympathy for the relatives of the deceased."

Strong military precautions were taken at the inquest. Two armored cars with machine guns were on guard.

Other evidence of apprehension over the prevailing unrest is seen in the erection of barbed wire defenses at The Four Courts. Special protection also has been given the Kildare Club, a resort of high officials and Unionists.

Urges Boycott of Ulster.

Disappointment is voiced in the press of Dublin today at the statement made by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons yesterday relative to settlement of the Irish question.

The discussions in the newspaper centre variously upon the three stipulations specified by the Premier as a basis for consideration of a settlement, namely, separate treatment for the six counties of northern Ulster, no secession of any part of Ireland from the United Kingdom, and no agreement involving any detraction from the security of the British Isles or of their safety in case of war.

The Freeman's Journal, which has advocated dominion home rule and which, under its present ownership represents large business interests in Dublin, suggests as a reply to the Premier a financial and commercial boycott of that part of Ulster which is causing all the trouble," a reprisal which, it says, already is being enforced to some extent.

The Independent says the Premier's first condition, insisting upon separate treatment for Ulster, "makes any discussion with him wholly futile," and adds that the Premier "knows that the minimum settlement which has the smallest chance of success is the bringing into operation of a constitution similar to that of the dominions overseas."

The Times, Unionist, says that the Irishman expected an important statement on the Irish policy, and "there are only two possible policies if the country is to be saved from anarchy: one of reconquest, the other conciliation, and two months hence both attempts must be more difficult and costly than they would be today."

LIMERICK, Aug. 17.—Armed and disguised men yesterday held up a freight and mail train near Cratloe, about six miles northwest of this city.

'INDICT ME,' M'GRAW PLEADS TO SWANN

ATTACKED, BOYD DECLARES

John J. McGraw, manager and part owner of the Giants, asked yesterday that he be indicted so that he could vindicate himself of "innuendoes" circulated in connection with the injuries suffered by John C. Slavin, popular comedian, whose skull was fractured a week ago last Sunday in front of the McGraw home at 301 West 109th Street.

McGraw's request for indictment was made by William J. Fallon, his attorney, who called upon Assistant District Attorney Albert B. Unger. District Attorney Swann said last night that the matter would be laid before the Grand Jury, but not until the condition of Slavin permitted him to testify. At St. Luke's Hospital his condition was reported as still grave.

During the day a little more light was shed on the fight at The Lambs. William H. Boyd, who chastised McGraw, broke his long silence and declared that McGraw had "rushed" him and that he had merely defended himself. Boyd declined to speak about the manager's statement that somebody had struck him on the head with a water bottle.

Although McGraw has been confined to his apartment for more than week—or reported there, at any rate—it was disclosed that Boyd's marks of battle had been two tiny cuts—one on the nose, the other over the eye.

Deprecates "Veiled Insinuations."

"It has just been brought to our attention," said Mr. Fallon after he had talked with Mr. Unger, "that the matters of the inquiry into the injury that befell John C. Slavin on Aug. 8, 1920, has been indefinitely postponed. This is particularly inopportune because of the widespread publicity that has been given this most unfortunate and regrettable occurrence. The position occupied by Mr. McGraw might in some way account for the extensive comment upon this matter, but can hardly suffice to explain the reason for advancing various veiled accusations against him.

"The injury that befell Mr. Slavin was absolutely accidental, and involves neither moral nor legal guilt upon the part of any one. Further than that, Mr. McGraw in no way participated in this happening nor in any way contributed to it.

"In view of the suggestions that have been made, without any foundations whatsoever, it seems only just and fair that this matter be proceeded with at once, lest the public be left to believe that an absolutely accidental occurrence involved some criminal or reprehensible act.

Demands Client's Vindication.

"Mr. McGraw's only desire is to vindicate himself against these innuendoes, and he asks the District Attorney to proceed as rapidly as possible to a full investigation of this transaction, and, if possible, to bring about the finding of an indictment so that these intangible accusations may assume a more concrete form in order to enable Mr. McGraw an opportunity to meet and refute these sayings.

"It seems that under all circumstances of this case Mr. McGraw has a right to be indicted so that he may establish before a competent tribunal his absolute innocence of any participation in bringing about the injury that befell Mr. Slavin.

"If the District Attorney be unable to proceed with this matter before the Grand Jury, an investigation might be had before any City Magistrate, openly and publicly, so that the whole truth of this occurrence may be known.

"We have no doubt that the District Attorney will make every endeavor to institute some legal proceedings wherein this matter may be comprehensibly inquired into and a definite result obtained.

"Concerning the occurrences at The Lambs, Mr. McGraw can do no more than repeat his statement made to Mr. Unger on Saturday last, at which time he stated that he is now prepared to prove that he was assaulted by Mr. Boyd, who admits that he struck the first blow. Although Mr. McGraw was not the aggressor in this proceeding, he at no time resorted to the use of any instrument or weapon with which to inflict any injury upon Mr. Boyd."

Boyd Replies to Fallon.

Boyd, who is slightly over medium height and doesn't look like a pugilist, did not want to talk about McGraw—that is, until Fallon's remarks were shown to him. Then he said:

"The Lambs' statement about McGraw being the aggressor is absolutely true. I didn't hit McGraw first. It was an unfortunate affair, and I really don't want to discuss it."

Boyd's attention was called to McGraw's statement of Monday about Boyd's alleged abusive language, and the assertion that a bystander had urged Boyd not to kill the Giants' manager.

"I did not bawl McGraw out," said Boyd, "and the fact is that he bawled me out. Some of the men standing near by said to me, 'Don't hit him,' when they heard his language. I didn't want to hit him, but when McGraw rushed at me what else was I to do?"

Boyd, who showed no trace of the fisticuffs, said in the fight he had been cut slightly across the nose, and also the skin above his eye had been abraded a trifle.

Before hurrying into one of The Lambs' elevators Boyd denied McGraw's statement that the baseball man had given $5 to two scrubwomen to soothe their feelings at hearing somebody's language, Boyd said that he was the giver of the money, and that he had made the gifts because he had learned both women were supporting large families, one of them being the mother of eleven children.

TAKE CORK LORD MAYOR TO ENGLAND ON WARSHIP

He Still Refuses Food, Following Conviction by Court-Martial for Sedition.

CORK, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Terence MacSweeney, Lord Mayor of Cork, was deported to England this morning aboard a destroyer, after having been found guilty of sedition by court-martial yesterday. The Lord Mayor still refused to eat.

MacSweeney, who has refused food since he was arrested last Thursday night, was convicted of having under his control the secret police cipher, of having made a seditious speech on the occasion of his election, and of having in his possession a copy of the resolution of the Cork Corporation pledging allegiance to the Dail Eireann, or "Irish Republican Parliament," which the court-martial declared was likely to cause disaffection. The court-martial was held under the Defense of the Realm Act regulations.

Washington to Start Fight For Cutting Coal Prices

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Active steps to limit the prices charged consumers for coal in various parts of the country will be begun shortly by the Department of Justice, it was said tonight by officials of the department.

Reports of the Federal Trade Commission covering the costs of production and distribution of coal are being studied by experts of the Department and data are being compiled upon which to base instructions to Federal Attorneys governing the prosecution of coal profiteering cases.

No attempt will be made to fix a price on coal, it was said, as the Attorney General can act only under the Lever act, but it was pointed out that by prosecution for violations of the law the price of coal can be kept within reasonable bounds.

FIGHT HIGHER FARES AT ALBANY HEARING

FAVOR RISE ON FREIGHT

Willard Says That Advances Will Tend to Cut the High Cost of Living.

ALBANY, Aug. 17.—Little opposition was shown today to the increase in freight rates for which the steam railroads of the State have applied to the Public Service Commission, to become effective on five days' notice after filing, but a storm of protest was raised against the proposed increase in passenger rates. The State Highway Commission and road building material dealers opposed the freight rates.

The hearing was held this afternoon and the testimony was closed. The commission will have an executive session Thursday, when its decision will probably be announced.

An increase of about 40 per cent. freight charges and a new rate of 3.6 cents per mile for passengers sought against the present rate of 3 cents per mile. Chairman Charles B. Hill received hundreds of letters and telegrams from chambers of commerce and other similar organizations throughout the State, from retail business concerns and individuals urging favorable action on the application of the railroads in their quest of greater revenue.

With the commission at today's hearing was Deputy Commissioner Morgan T. Donnelly, and Assistant Counsel Mullen representing the First District Public Service Commission and M. M. Fertig, Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York City.

Wants Inquiry by This City.

Mr. Fertig asked the commission to defer the making of an order on applications covering freight and passenger rates affecting residents of New York City until an investigation can be made by the city authorities. He said he believed in granting an increase where it was shown to be necessary. The question was vital to New York City, he declared, and requested an opportunity to look into the applications, as far as they relate to Long Island and New York commuting travel.

Chairman Hill said the commission would take into consideration the application of Mr. Fertig and announce its decision later.

C. C. Paulding, counsel for the New York Central Railroad, represented various railroad companies, with William L. Visscher of Albany and W. C. Noyes, counsel for the D., L. & W. Railroad. Morgan J. O'Brien and other attorneys appeared on behalf of a committee of counsel for various railroads.

Mr. Paulding, urging the increased passenger rates, said the recent labor award for an increase of $35,000,000 a year in the New York Central's payroll. The commission has the right to consider the statutory rate when there was a question of discrimination or an inadequate return.

Roads Feel High Living Costs.

"The railroads are feeling the high cost of living just as individuals are," he said. "The actual deficit for the first four months of 1920 was estimated at $59,000,000, and in operating expenses, taxes and labor about 100 per cent., while the increase in freight rates had been 36 per cent. Based on present rates, and with the recent wage increase, a deficit of $540,000,000 in 1920 was indicated," Mr. Willard said. "About 80 per cent. of the railroads' freight business was interstate and about 20 per cent. intrastate," he added.

Mr. Willard argued for a proper adjustment of freight and passenger rates to other States, declaring that if there was to be a difference, intrastate rates should be greater than interstate rates.

"It is simply a case of the higher cost of living among the railroads as among individuals," Mr. Willard said, adding that if the railroads did not receive a proper return after Sept. 1 many would be insolvent.

As a result of the war many of the railroads were inadequately equipped, Mr. Willard stated. Steps were now being taken to bring up the roads to a more efficient condition, with the cooperation of the public. The Eastern district railroads, he said, should spend from six hundred million to a billion dollars if the people are to have adequate transportation facilities.

Nothing will do so much to bring down the cost of living as increased rates and increased revenue, Mr. Willard stated. "Labor had been rewarded but capital has been working for nothing," he declared.

Following a suggestion by Chairman Hill, there was a conference between Mr. Paulding and the other attorneys representing the railroads, and it was later stipulated by the railroads that the applications were made without prejudice to the right of the commission, in case it should grant an order to file, to suspend any particular rate or rates on complaint, or by the commission's own motion, for investigation.

F. W. Brown, representing the State Highways Commission, asked that all rates affecting material for highway improvements be postponed because of failure of the carriers to make deliveries to road contractors.

Chairman Hill said it would be impossible to hear the merits of any particular complaint at present, but under the stipulation, he informed Mr. Brown there would be protection for certain cases.

ALCOHOLIC WARDS FILLING UP AGAIN

200 PATIENTS A MONTH

Number of Sufferers Rapidly Approaching That of "Wet" Days, Says Report.

An increase in the sale of intoxicating liquors in New York City is indicated in the statement of Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Public Charities, that the number of persons treated in the alcoholic wards of Bellevue Hospital and Kings County Hospital, to which institutions virtually all alcoholic cases of the city are sent, are fast approaching the number cared for before the advent of prohibition. In the last few weeks, the number of patients in these institutions greatly increased, the Commissioner said.

Commissioner Coler said the alcoholic cases the institutions are now called upon to treat are of a very unusual type. "They are getting something," the Commissioner said, "that puts them out of business in a few minutes, from the reports made to our institutions. It is something like the so-called 'knockout drops.' The victim goes down in a hurry, without warning, but recovers quickly—if at all. Sometimes he falls to recover at all. We have had a number of such cases recently."

"The lid is off," said a physician at Bellevue Hospital, as an explanation for the big increase in the number of alcoholic cases being treated there. He said there was every indication that New York was rapidly approaching the wide-open days of the legalized saloon. He reported a big decrease in the number of women patients. Virtually no women are received for treatment now, whereas formerly they were almost equal in number to the men. There are comparatively few cases of delirium tremens now. Nearly all persons taken to the institution are able to leave the next morning. "The stuff acts quickly both ways," an attendant said. "In nearly every case it is found that the person has had only one or two drinks, after which his mind becomes blank. He knows nothing until he awakens in the institution the next morning."

It was said that at Bellevue the number of alcoholic cases treated will exceed 200 a month.

GIANTS SPLIT BILL WITH THE PHILLIES

Win Opening Game, 8 to 7, in Ten Innings, and Then Drop Pitching Duel by 3 to 2.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—The Giants got an even break here this afternoon in the double-header that closed the relationship of the New York and Philadelphia clubs until after the two have taken a swing through the Western section of the league. The visitors, away to a poor start in the opener, went to the front with a flock of seven runs in the fifth inning, but were tied later and finally won in the tenth, 8 to 7. The Phillies took the second section of the twin bill by a batting rally in the ninth inning which pulled them from behind and earned the victory, 3 to 2.

Pitchers came and departed at frequent intervals in the opener. Fred Toney started the engagement, was hit rather hard and finally departed by the pinch-hitter route in the busy fifth, which saw the Giants come from behind and take the lead. Douglas followed but was taken out before the Phils had closed their half of the fifth and Jess Barnes finished. Eppa Rixey opened for the Phils but was driven into retirement in the fifth-inning bombardment and Meadows, his successor, gave way to a pinch-hitter in the sixth. Betts pitched two innings, then departed so Gavvy Cravath might attempt a rally and George Smith worked the last two frames, long enough to have the defeat charged up to him.

Free hitting was the rule in the opener, but the second game was a close pitching duel between Art Nehf for the Giants and Wilbur Hubbell for the Phils.

Phils Take Early Lead.

The Phils went to the front in the second inning of the opening game. With the first two batsmen retired on a fast double play, Jack Miller singled to right, went to third on Wrightstone's single in the same direction, and then the pair worked a double steal, J. Miller scoring.

In the next inning three more runs drifted over for the Phils. Rixey singled to centre, Paulette was hit by a pitched ball and Le Bourveau got an infield hit to Frisch. In a belated effort to throw the runner out at first base Frisch threw past Kelly, both Rixey and Paulette scoring. The error gave Le Bourveau went to third on the misplay and scored when King threw past the plate after taking Rawlings's fly.

This four-run lead was wiped out by the Giants with a string of seven runs in the fifth inning. Frisch doubled to centre, Kelly went to Wrightstone, Frisch stole third and King walked. Doyle's single to centre sent Frisch over the plate and King to third. Snyder singled to left and King scored, Doyle stopping at second. Roy Grimes batted for Toney and smashed a double to left which scored Doyle and put Snyder on third. This ended Rixey's work for the afternoon, Meadows replacing him. An intentional pass to Burns filled the corners and Earl Smith, batting for Lefevre, singled to right, scoring Snyder and Grimes to third. Burns was on the hit and Smith to second on the throw in. After Young had died on strikes, Frisch beat out a roller to Paulette, Burns scoring and Smith taking third. Smith and Frisch then worked a double steal, the former scoring. Kelly's strike-out ended the inning.

Phils Tie It Up.

Singles by Le Bourveau, Williams and Meusel added a run to the Phils' total in the fifth. In the seventh another run developed on Meusel's triple to centre and a single by J. Miller. In the ninth the Phils got over the tieing run. With one out, Williams doubled to right, Meusel walked and was forced at second by J. Miller, Frisch to Doyle. Doyle threw wild to Kelly in his effort for a double play and Williams went over with the tieing run.

The Giants won in the tenth on Young's double to centre, Frisch's single to right and Kelly's sacrifice to Le Bourveau. The Phils were retired in order in the home half of the tenth.

In the second game Hubbell and Nehf set the batsmen down runless for five innings, and then the Giants took the lead in the sixth. Young doubled to left, Frisch sacrificed and Kelly rolled to J. Miller. Young was hung up between third and the plate, but managed to get back to third safely; Kelly reached second on the play, and scored behind Young when Spencer hit to right for two bases.

The Phils picked up a run in their half of the same inning. Hubbell was safe on Doyle's fumble, Paulette flied out Le Bourveau and then singles by Rawlings and Hubbell filled the bases. While Williams was forcing Rawlings at second, Doyle to Frisch, Hubbell crossed the plate.

This was all the scoring until the last half of the ninth. Cravath, batting for Le Bourveau, started the Phils with a double and Stengel ran for his manager. After the next two batsmen had been retired, Meusel, J. Miller and R. Miller singled in succession, R. Miller's hit scoring Meusel with the winning run.

SENATORS IN EVEN BREAK.

Lose to Browns, 7 to 2, and Then Capture 11-Inning Game, 10 to 9.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—St. Louis and Washington split even in a double header today, the visitors taking the first game 7 to 2, and the locals winning out, 10 to 9, in the final, a free-hitting contest, which went eleven innings. The winning run was the result of a hit and steal of second by Shanks and a single by Gharrity.

In the opening game, after being scored on in the first inning, Courtney blanked the Browns until the ninth, when he was hammered for six runs.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—President Edward R. Maier of the Vernon Baseball Club declared today his readiness to comply with the suggestion of W. H. McCarthy, President of the Pacific Coast League, that Baker Borton, former Vernon first basemen, be prosecuted on a charge of criminal libel.

McCarthy, in a telegram last night, urged that proceedings be instituted by players accused by Borton of having contributed to a fund to aid in winning the pennant last year.

JERSEY CITY LOSES FIRST, WINS SECOND

Bill Donovan's Skeeters celebrated the roundup of another protracted home series yesterday with an even division with Buffalo in the concluding games of their series in the home of the Skeeters, Buffalo getting the big end in the initial contest by a margin of 2 to 1, while Jersey City grabbed the closing heat by a score of 3 to 2, giving the Jerseymen the advantage over Wiltse's herd of bisons by three games to one.

Both games developed the keenest of pitching duels, which resulted in a marked scarcity of bingles. In the curtain raiser, Harry Biemiller, for Jersey City, and McCabe for Buffalo, were the rival box men, and they were exceedingly selfish in that they

WESTERN TEAM ADVANCES

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—William M. Johnston, lawn tennis champion of the United States, today became the permanent possessor of the famous Longwood bowl, getting his third and last leg by a straight-set victory over Nathaniel W. Niles, 6—4, 6—0, 6—0, in the postponed challenge round on the new turf at Chestnut Hill. Willis E. Davis and Roland Roberts won the feature doubles match of the day from Watson M. Washburn and Dean Mathey, in five sets, scored 6—3, 10—12, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3, thus advancing to the third round of the national championship. Walter Hayes and Ralph Burdick, the Western title holders, arriving late, began with a five-set victory over J. W. Foster and Josiah Wheelright, while R. B. Bidwell and W. E. Porter forced F. B. Alexander and S. H. Voshell to a hard four-set match. Other winners were Mahan and Yencken, Tilden and Garland, and Wallace Johnson and Pearson, several of the leading contenders remaining idle.

The Johnston-Niles match showed the champion at his best, even though he was not sufficiently extended to call upon his volleying skill. He played almost entirely from deep court, simply outplacing and outspeeding his opponent at his own game. The opening set should have been Johnston's by a more one-sided score, for he led at 5—2, and only a temporary slump enabled Niles to take two games in succession, necessitating another break in service to finish the session at 6—4. From this point to the end of the match, however, the champion completely outclassed his opponent, taking two love sets in a row, with a total run of thirteen straight games to victory.

Champion's Backhand Works Well.

In this amazing streak of successful hitting, Johnston made most of his killing shots off his forehand, but his backhand strokes were exceedingly effective also, being fairly severe and wonderfully accurate, as well as steady under the constant pounding to which it was subjected. Johnston's usual method of winning a point was to exchange drives with his rival until he either found a set-up for his wallop or a sure opening for a placement. Only occassionally did he come in close to finish a rally, and this was chiefly in the later stages of the contest.

The heat was terrific and both players eventually protected their heads from the sun, Niles wearing a white hat and Johnston a gray cap, an unusual ornament for his sandy hair. It was fortunate that the affair ended quickly, for a four or five set match of singles today would have been an exhausting affair. Niles did not play as well as last week at Newport, when he was within two points of defeating the champion, then just off shipboard. But the Bostonian was by no means weak, returning some of Johnston's hardest shots and generally anticipating their direction with splendid instinct. But his tennis was of necessity chiefly defensive and ultimately he was simply overwhelmed by superior pace, with Johnston's fastest drives striking consistently within inches of the lines.

The vast difference between the two players is emphasized by the stroke analysis, which shows that Niles earned only eight points in the entire match, seven placements and one service ace, whereas Johnston scored on clean drives or volleys no less than forty-one times, a total almost balancing that of his errors. Niles made more of the latter than did the winner, but it was his lack of real forcing shots and of an irresistible punch against the habitual steadiness of the champion, that actually told the story.

Johnston lost his service at the start, but promptly got back the game with four perfect shots, his opponent failing to score a single point. A net-corder gave Johnston a good beginning for his next service and he won with a good smash, breaking through again two games later for a lead of 4—2. He made it 5—2 on his own delivery, but Niles served successfully in turn and, when Johnston added a double fault to three other errors, the games stood at 5—4, with Niles in a position to tie up the set on service. Johnston, however, came in for some good volleying, and speedily forced enough technical errors to take the set, 6—4.

Two Love Sets Follow.

The second set was not even a contest. Niles threw away his first service with two double faults and Johnston broke through him again with clean, sweeping drives that could not be returned. Three winning service games of his own brought the score to 5—0, and then the champion made it a whitewash by upsetting the Niles delivery once more in a deuce game. The third was a similar story, with the net-cord again helping Johnston several times, but the greatest damage still coming from the terrific sweep of his racquet on the forehand side. Service meant nothing to him and he broke through again on the second and fourth games, although in the latter Niles delivered the only clean ace of the entire contest. A love game on service, his twelfth in succession, once more gave Johnston a 5—0 lead, with Niles totaling only nine points in the third set up to that time.

But the final game was a miniature match in itself, and marked the best resistance of the day on the part of the loser. With Niles serving, Johnston brought up the match point at 30-40 with a smash which ended in one of the finest rallies of the match, Niles diving for a wonderful backhand pick-up, after having been apparently beaten by the direction of Johnston's first volley. A clean pass, very hard across court, made the points deuce and an error by Johnston gave the challenger a chance to pull out the game. He erred in turn, however, and missed still another chance when Johnston killed the ball off the ground.

Another smash made it match point once more, but Niles saved the situation with a splendid volley. He netted the next, and was again protected from immediate disaster by an error, and Johnston in turn was forced to cancel the vantage point against him, chopping to the corner after a great but futile get by Niles. A fourth match point was lost when Johnston netted, but the next one counted. Niles drove out twice in succession, and it was all over at 6—0 with a 22-point game for the finish.

Service a Big Factor.

Davis and Roberts won over Washburn and Mathey chiefly because they always had an aggressive service with which to work whenever there was a break in their favor. Roberts was the more effective of the two in this respect, losing his delivery only once in the course of the match. But both he and his partner remained something of an enigma to their opponents to the very end. If the Californians had backed up their great serving with equally good volleying and overhead hitting, the match would have been over in short order. As it was, they were worked to their limit by the Easterners, particularly in the long second set, which went to the losers at 12—10. The difference of a point here and there in this session would have changed the entire affair into a straight-set victory for the Coast team.

Washburn and Mathey showed splendid head work throughout and generally had the better of the short range volleying duels at the net, of which there were plenty. But neither possessed a serving punch that would guarantee a game when it was badly needed, and both were a trifle weak in putting the ball away from a setup, Washburn being particularly uncertain overhead. Defensively, the Easterners were impressive, but, with both Davis and Roberts smashing well, they were fairly sure to send up a short lob sooner or later, and any such shot was fairly certain to be condemned to instant death. Mathey was the better overhead hitter of his side, although he weakened in this respect toward the close. He had a fatal tendency to serve double faults also, and several of these were directly responsible for the loss of his delivery.

A Well Earned Victory.

On the whole, it was a well earned victory for speed, youth and strength over mature court experience. The Californians were going as well as ever at the finish, whereas Washburn and Mathey tired perceptibly after they had squared the match.

The Easterners used the unconventional formation of having the net man always on the same side of the court as the server, changing with him, and in general these tactics proved successful, although Washburn lost his opening delivery by his own errors overhead. Davis also lost on his first attempt at serving, Mathey beating him with a wonderful lobbed volley and a good backhand shot down the middle of the court. The Californians advanced to 5—2 on games and were within a point of the set against Mathey's service at 15—40. Errors lost them this chance, however, but Davis cleaned up on his next delivery, closing the 6—3 session with a smash which was called good on a close decision at the base line.

The second set was a duel of service up to 5-all, the seventh game containing some astonishing rallies, in one of which Washburn made a perfect return while sitting on the ground. Mathey threw away the first advantage game with a double fault, but his team equalized against Davis on Washburn's good volley, just clipping the line. Another break came against the Easterners when Mathey lost a love game with four bad errors of his own making, starting with a double fault, but again the count was evened against Davis. After that things were regular up to 11—10. Then Roberts brought up the set point by netting an easy smash. Mathey made a spectacular backhand pickup which turned into a perfect lob that sailed safely into the corner and the match was all square at 12—10.

Double Fault Costly.

A single break in service sufficed to decide the third set, Mathey losing the opening game with a double fault, his opponents keeping this advantage to the end of a 6—4 session, Davis smashing hard for the winning points.

The fourth set was very irregular, service losing frequently, but Washburn and Mathey finally pulled out ahead at 6—4 by upsetting Roberts for a love game, ending in a fine shot by Mathey down the middle of the court.

It was almost dark during the rubber. The Californians broke through Washburn in the seventh game, and went to 5—3 when Roberts served a whitewash. Mathey then dropped his delivery for the last time, netting the ball to end the final rally for a 6—8 set and the match.

Tilden and Garland found no real opposition in Jayne and Brain, while the two other teams most favored for the title, Johnston and Griffin and Williams and Harte, had no chance to play because of the Longwood singles match. Foster and Wheelwright put up a wonderful battle against Hayes and Burdick, and the showing of Bidwell and Porter against Alexander and Voshell was almost equally good.

The summaries:

MAY COMPETE IN ENGLAND.

U. S. Olympic Athletes Considering Proposal for Dual Meet.

ANTWERP, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—A proposal by English athletes of Oxford and Cambridge Universities to have the Olympic entrants from the United States compete with Great Britain's stars in a dual meet at Queen's Club, London, Sept. 4 is under consideration, it was learned here today. The project is said to be fostered by athletes of the two English institutions, who are organizing an association similar to the American Intercollegiate Association, to increase interest in athletics in England.

The Americans are reported to have agreed to the plan for the dual meet if it does not interfere with the date set for their sailing, which has not yet been fixed by the Government transport service.

The events suggested by the Englishmen for the proposed meet are along the lines of the Pennsylvania relays. They would include a 400-yard race by a team of four, each man running 100 yards; a mile run for quarter-milers, a two-mile run for half-milers and four and eight mile runs for distance men. The program also would include open events, the high and broad jumps, and a high hurdles race of 120 yards.

Women's Strongest Tennis Team Unites East and West

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—Tennis critics are almost ready to declare that Miss Marion Zinderstein and Miss Eleanor Tennant constitute the best feminine doubles team they have ever seen in action. This East-West combination has won every tournament entered thus far, and in no case has it been forced even near the limit of its abilities. The Bostonian and the Californian will not, however, be paired in the national title event, for it has been decided in the interest of the game, and particularly in view of healthy intersectional rivalry, that the present champions, Miss Eleanor Goss and Miss Zinderstein, should remain partners in defense of their title, while Miss Tennant will be teamed with a fellow Californian, probably Miss Helen Baker. Nevertheless, it is to be hoped that Miss Tennant and Miss Zinderstein may some day be driven to show just how far their combination of skill will carry them.

PRO GOLFERS BEGIN FIVE-DAY STRUGGLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Thirty-two professional golfers, representing the pick of the country since they were obliged to qualify in their various geographical sections several weeks ago, toed the mark this hot morning at the Flossmoor Country Club in that long grind, inaugurated in 1916, and known as the P. G. A. championship. Second only to the national open in importance for the paid swingers of cleek and niblick, it represents an infinitely harder test. It is the sole match play tourney held in this country for pros; it is spread over five full days, and matches are at thirty-six holes, from first to last with no short-cuts, unless by the method used by Louis Tellier of Boston today when he eliminated Joe Roseman, a Chicagoan, on the 27th hole, 10 up and 9 to play. Louie is generally a serious little French midget, but today he was fit to be tied for his glee. He well remembers last year's championship at the Engineers' Club, Roslyn, L. I., when fate cast him out in the first round.

The pros from the Eastern States had a good deal to brag about today, for despite the almost heroic efforts of Flossmoor officials to put their course in shape for this classic, the layout was infinitely different from any course known to the players from the Atlantic seaboard. Long-suffering from lack of rains in the Chicago district has left Flossmoor several degrees drier than the Sahara, and standing any place on the course the links look a dull, drab khaki brown. From the first to the eighteenth holes, the only bright spots are the putting greens and the tees which have been nursed along with hourly applications of a garden hose. A burned-up golf course in mid-Summer is an object to be pitied.

Hutchison Added Entry.

There were a couple of changes today in the qualifiers, due to the withdrawal of George Fotheringham, of the New York section, and Arthur Clarkson, Kenosha, Wis., of the Middle Western district.

According to P. G. A. regulations such vacancies must be filled from the section where the tournament is being held and two Chicagoans, who had failed to qualify a month ago at the regular tests, were admitted. Fortunately, Jock Hutchison was next on the list. It would have been a sour looking event without happy Jock's smiling face, and more especially because he has won the Western open title and tied for runner-up place in the National since that off-day when he failed to qualify. Jock drew a tough customer for an opponent today but managed to stow Eddie Loos, the former Van Cortlandt Park caddie, away out of further harm by 5 and 3. The other newcomer was Roseman, who was so rudely handled by Tellier.

Long Jim Barnes, who won the professional championship in the first tourney in 1916 and defended it last year after waiting two years because of the war, was expected to win today hands down. Seeing him on the road to this achievement the interest swerved thence forth to the royal battle between those two New or Irishmen, Paddy Doyle of Deal, and Peter O'Hara, of Shackamaxon. It represented virtually the Sein Finn championship of America, and Peter beat Pat. This battle had been in the making all season and there was no better place to stage it than under the conditions of the current tournament. O'Hara deserved to win by six or seven holes, because Doyle played his wooden shots as if he were in a roundhouse.

Doyle's Drives Uncanny.

Doyle's hooked drives at times almost completed an arc of 360 degrees. He was rarely on the fairway with his tee shots and made brilliant defense of his prestige only by commendable use of his irons, especially his mashie and his niblick. Time and again he was forced to recover himself from long grass, from ditches and from sand traps, and his uncanny ability to lay approaches stone dead to the pin gave O'Hara many a bad session.

O'Hara was two up and three to go in the morning round, yet failed to hold this advantage and finished all square. Starting out on the second circuit after luncheon, Doyle began his hooking and O'Hara won the first two holes, then lost the next two. Doyle went to one up by winning the sixth and a bit of luck kept him from losing this at the ninth. His second shot was wildly hooked, but lodged several inches down a gopher hole. He was permitted to drop a ball over his shounider, pitched brilliantly to the green and saved himself the half.

O'Hara played regulation golf on the tenth, whereas Doyle sliced his first and second shots to rough, and the former won this hole, 4 to 5, once again squaring the match.

He won the next and should have the twelfth, which was halved, except for a missed halving putt which went into the hole and hopped out. Both recovered well in the well-trapped fourteenth hole and were able to save their fours. Doyle squared the match once again when he won the fifteenth, O'Hara taking three putts. They halved the uphill sixteenth, although it nearly broke O'Hara's heart. His drive was 300 yards long if it was an inch, whereas Doyle pulled his across two fairways. O'Hara's chip to the plateau green struck the edge and bounded back, and when Doyle was able to gain the green, on his third also, they each took two putts and halved it in fives.

Drives Into Two Brooks.

Still all square, Doyle hooked his drive to the seventeenth to the bel of a dry brook and played out into a wet brook which traverses the course. His attemnt to get out went kerplunk into the muddy bank, and with some Gaelic remark, which he refused to translate into English, he picked up, conceding the hole to O'Hara. They halved the long bog-leg eighteenth in par fives and O'Hara won the match, 1 up.

Jim Barnes won his first round match, to be sure, but the lanky Cornishman had an uncomfortable day playing against George Bowden of Commonwealth, the new Massachusetts open champion. Just a very few breaks of luck turned the issue in the morning round and left Barnes 1 up instead of Bowden. In the afternoon Barnes put a new appraisal on his opponent and found he had to display better golf than he had played in the morning. He won the second and fourth holes, then took the seventh when he caught Bowden off his game momentarily, the latter failing to gain the green on his short tee shot. By losing the ninth Barnes made the turn for home 3 up. He sank an eighteen-foot putt on the eleventh for a birdie 2, went back a hole by taking a six on the next hole to Bowden's five, but ended the match to win by 4 and 3 when he beat Bowden on the fifteenth.

At least one of the day's first round matches took on an international flavor. This was between Pat O'Hara of Shackamaxon, the Irish professional champion, and J. Douglas Edgar of Atlanta, Ga., the Canadian open titleholder. Edgar won by 1 up after leading the morning round by two holes.

O'Hara Misses His Putts.

Coming to the thirty-second hole O'Hara was two up and five holes to play, yet the balance was swung against him in those few remaining holes. He miss a short putt on the thirty-second, missed an easy one eight inches long on the next, squaring the match and then to add misery to hard luck missed a three-footer on the thirty-fourth and halved the hole with the Atlantan. Edgar laid O'Hara a stymie on the seventeenth, winning the hole and going to 1 up and then halving the last.

The only extra hole encounter proved to be a rip-roaring battle between Charlie Hoffner, the young homebred of Philadelphia, and Laurie Ayton, the recently arrived Scot, who is now at the Evanston Club, near Chicago. Ayton won on the third extra hole, the thirty-ninth, as a result of a putt nearly forty feet long. Other New Yorkers in addition to Doyle and Pat O'Hara bought railroad tickets for home tonight. Willie MacFarlane of Port Washington, L. I., lost surprisingly to Alex Cunningham, the Missouri Scot; Tom Boyd of Fox Hills bowed before Joe Sylvester of St. Albans, and Isaac Mackie of Canoe Brook was defeated by George Thompson of Mount Vernon.

MISS BAKER EASY WINNER.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—With still more of the feminine stars of the racquet flocking to the old tennis courts of the Longwood Cricket Club today, the women's invitation tournament took on the aspect of a truly significant event. Mrs. Barger-Wallach, former national champion, and Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris arrived from Newport to take part in the doubles event, while Miss Helen Baker, the Pacific Coast champion, made her first appearance in the singles.

Miss Baker, who already had the advantage of a bye and a default, found little opposition in Miss Frances Jennings, whom she defeated with the loss of only one game. Yet the match served to reveal a wealth of possibilities in the strokes of the Californian, and this impression was confirmed later in an informal set which she played with Miss Edith Sigourney of Beston.

Miss Tennant also advanced without difficulty, defeating Miss Rosamund Newton, 6—1, 6—2, and showing a disposition to hurl her drive more frequently than in the past to balance her chopping.

Miss Marion Zinderstein, on whom the hopes of the East are pinned in this tournament, maintained the high standard of the other leaders in her match with Miss Brenda Hedstrom, winning without undue exertion, while Miss Florence Ballin administered the first defeat to a Californian when she eliminated Mrs. Anna Leachman at 6—1, 6—2.

The summaries:

Wins Qualifying Cup in Annual Bretton Woods Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT PLEASANT, N. H., Aug. 17.—The annual Bretton Woods golf tournament began today with the qualification round, the qualifying cup being won by P. J. Moran of Pawtucket, R. I., who brought in a card of 74. Five sixteens qualified and match play will begin early tomorrow. Among the entries were the veteran golfer Louis A. Hamilton, Wykagyl and Garden City, who has held several Bretton Woods championships; P. J. Moran, Pawtucket, who also has held the title here, and Alex H. Revell, the Chicago golf star.

Tee Shot Six Feet from Cup, But Tellier Loses the Hole

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 17.—Louis Tellier, the Boston golf professional from the Brae Burn Country Club, has a yarn that will be told on nineteenth holes for months to come. Playing against Joe Roseman of Westmoreland today, Tellier's tee shot, on the short seventh hole, over the Flossmoor Lake, stopped less than six feet from the cup, practically assuring him of a birdie two. But he did not get this two. In fact, he lost the hole, even though Roseman drove twice into the pond. After his first drive Roseman, now playing three because of the penalty, smacked his replayed drive into the far bank at the water's edge. In playing out his ball hit Tellier's caddy, disqualifying the Frenchman because of the technicality. Roseman won only two holes today and this was his first. Tellier captured the match by the one-sided margin of 10 and 8.

GOTELLI FINALIST IN GOLF TOURNEY

Golf cups may come and go, but the famous old Herald Cup, emblematic of the city championships, does neither. It stands firm and secure and seems to be nearly as eternal as the Rock of Gibraltar. After twenty-one years of competition the old trophy is still without a permanent owner and it bids fair to continue so, at least for another year. In the second round of the 1920 struggle for the cup yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park the only two competitors who have a leg on the cup and might have won it permanently with another victory this year were eliminated.

The first of the contenders to go was "Steamboat Bill" Wallace, who won a leg on the cup back in 1908. Wallace had as his opponent W. T. Gotelli, who hailed from the Pacific Coast before he took up residence in this city. Gotelli, incidentally, was also successful in the third round and today will meet Richard Walsh of the Scottish-American Golf Club, who emerged triumphantly after both the morning and afternoon rounds.

In his match with Gotelli, Wallace was trailing badly at the turn and was three down at the fourteenth hole. On the next three greens, however, Wallace awoke to the situation and squared the match by taking all three holes. On the downhill short eighteenth, Wallace laid his tee shot on the green, while Gotelli pulled his drive fifty feet to the left of the green. In playing his odd he recovered in remarkable style and pitched his shot up to within three feet of the cup. Wallace thereupon laid himself a stymie and lost the hole and match by one down.

Purcell Also Loses.

The other leg-holder to encounter disaster was Walter Purcell of the Dunwoodie Country Club. He was eliminated by Frank M. Gould of the New York Newspaper Golf Club by one up. The latter squared the match on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes after he had been two down, and took the final hole by an exhibition of skill and steadiness. The match was a battle royal all the way, as was the Gotelli-Wallace match, both former leg holders yielding only after a torrid resistance.

Other second-round winners were R. Walsh and E. W. Aaron, unattached. Walsh conquered Bob Tobin, unattached, two up, and Aaron was the victor over H. Eckhart, Woodhaven Golf Club, four and three, leaving Walsh, Aaron, Gotelli and Gould to meet in the semi-final round.

The first match of the semi-final round, that between Aaron and Walsh, provided the most sensational golf of the afternoon. Aaron was defeated, but not before he had gone out in better than par and had given an exhibition that has not been seen in many a day at Van Cortlandt. The outward journey, twenty-five yards less than 3,000 yards, was covered by Aaron in 34 strokes, two under the par of 36. Few men have lowered the par on the Van Cortlandt links and Aaron had to play remarkable golf to achieve the feat. He was three up at the turn and seemed to have the match stowed away in his vest pocket, in view of the superlative golf he was playing.

To make a rosy prospect rosier, Aaron won the tenth hole with a four, while Walsh was taking five strokes. The eleventh was halved, as were the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth. Walsh won all the rest, taking four on the tenth and sixteenth and only three on the last two greens, for a total of 71, as compared to Aaron's 72. The match was squared on the next to last hole, when Walsh required only a three to Aaron's five. On the eighteenth Walsh won the hole with a three to his opponent's four, and took the match.

The cards were:

Out—
Aaron	4	4	4	3	4	5	4	2	4	—34
Walsh	4	5	3	3	6	4	4	3	5	—37
In—
Aaron	4	3	5	4	4	4	5	5	4	—38—72
Walsh	5	3	4	4	4	4	3	3	4	—34—71

Scores Easy Victory.

Gotelli's match with Gould was an easy triumph for the former, who looms up as the favorite when he meets Walsh in today's final. Gotelli had little trouble in capturing the victory, although his putting was off color and he lost several holes that should have been marked up to his credit. The score was 2 and 1.

In the second round of the beaten-eight competition there were three defaults. Jack Kieran, Ferd Bammon and H. H. Kinsman won in this manner. The only match played was between H. C. Bell of the Scottish-American Golf Club and C. H. Serine of the New York Newspaper Golf Club, the former winning, 3 and 2. The second round saw more action, Kieran defeating Bammon, 5 and 4, and Bell taking the measure of Kinsman, 1 up in twenty holes. The latter was one of the closest and hardest-fought matches of the day's play. Bell and Kieran will meet in the final round for the consolation medal this morning over eighteen holes.

The final in the cup tourney will also take place today between Walsh and Gotelli. There will be thirty-six holes of play, eighteen rounds in the morning and the remainder in the afternoon. Kieran and Gotelli will meet later to settle the tie between them for the qualifying medal.

PLAN WELCOME FOR TEAM.

A reception surpassing anything of its kind ever before arranged will greet America's returning Olympic games heroes next month if plans outlined tentatively last night at a meeting of the Metropolitan A. A. U. Board of Governors in the 71st Regiment Armory are successful. The project is as yet in its infancy, but with more than a month in which to arrange their plans the athletic officials, under the leadership of Herman Obertubbesing, acting A. A. U. national secretary, are confident the welcome home ceremonies will surpass even the great receptions of 1908 and 1912.

The preliminary arrangements provide for a parade, a theatre party and a banquet. Definite adoption of this program, however, must wait for developments expected within the next week, during which time the officials will be actively engaged in the campaign for a suitable reception to the lads who are now abroad fighting with all their strength against stiff opposition in the Olympic games at Antwerp. A Plan and Scope Committee, consisting of fifteen officials under Acting Secretary Obertubbesing, was appointed at last night's meeting to inaugurate this campaign. This committee will confer with city officials and will report back at a meeting which will be held probably next week.

About fifty ardent followers of track and field sports attended the session and were unanimous in the indorsement of the plans outlined by Chairman Obertubbesing. Adoption of definite plans, however, was deferred until the Plan and Scope Committee reports its findings at the next meeting, when it is expected a complete plan will be arranged for welcoming the Olympic heroes on their return home late next month.

King Albert Congratulates Victors in Olympic Stadium

ANTWERP, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—King Albert of Belgium went into the arena after the tug-of-war and congratulated R. W. Landon, the winner of the high jump. The King also extended his congratulations to Guillemot, the French distance runner, who had just achieved victory in the 5,000-meter event. King Albert was plentifully photographed while this was in progress.

NEW RECORD MADE IN OLYMPIC GAMES

In putting the shot big Pat MacDonald didn't do himself justice and took second place with a throw 14.8 meters, behind Niklander of Finland, who made a great put of 14 meters 15½ centimeters. Liversedge was the only other American to qualify for the final.

The great disappointment of the day was the failure of the Army tug-of-war team to stand up against the City of London police. The Americans were obviously outweighed by the burly Bobbies, who at the first pull hauled them over in 13 2-5 seconds, and at the second in 18 4-5 seconds. When it is considered that some days ago the Army team succeeded in pulling fifteen sailors all around the school yard at headquarters the strength of the policemen has a formidable appearance.

Today the judges reconsidered the appeal made by the French and supported by the British in connection with the start and finish of the 100-yard dash. As all the competitors ran the race without protest, they decided that it must stand, but in awarding places they decided by a majority vote that Scholz should take fourth place in front of the Frenchman, Alikhan, who was yesterday placed fourth.

Except for this small incident, due to the nervousness of the starter more than anything else, the harmony of the games has been complete, and whatever shortcomings Antwerp may have as a site, the weather cannot be counted among them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Aug. 18.—In a dispatch from Antwerp The Daily Chronicle correspondent at the Olympic games says:

"A story published in an English newspaper has caused a lot of feeling here. It is to the effect that America protested against the Canadian, Earl Thomson, who holds the world's record for the 120-yard hurdles.

"I have this morning had an interview with Jack Moakley, the chief American coach; three other American coaches, and Earl Thomson himself, all of whom say the story is entirely without foundation. Earl Thomson is, in fact, training with the American team, and, further, I am asked to state that the friendliest relations exist between the teams of all nations."

Honors Distributed.

ANTWERP, Aug. 17 (Associated Press).—The progress of athletic advancement throughout the world was demonstrated today by the wide distribution of honors in the third day's contests in the seventh Olympiad.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The movement of stocks yesterday showed once again that the Polish situation was far more remote as a market influence than domestic business and credit problems and uncertainties over the foreign trade outlook. In the face of the most encouraging news that so far had arrived from the fighting lines about Warsaw the industrial issues lost ground easily, some declines running as much as three to five points. The market acted as though professional bears were again hitting spots which reacted promptly under pressure the week before last, but there were also evidences of liquidation by holders of shares on margin. A stabilizing force which might have been expected from reports of Polish successes was entirely lacking. The persistent decline of several highly speculative stocks suggested fresh calling of loans, and a rise of the demand loan rate from 7 to 8 per cent. in the afternoon told of more tension in the money market than had been seen for two weeks.

A single day's business, of course, cannot be viewed as a barometer of a speculative period, but yesterday's reaction, which included the railroad stocks, drew fresh attention to the recent sharp break of prices. Last week's recovery may have been encouraging to the confirmed believers in a forward movement, but it changed not at all the fact that money and credit conditions were as tight as ever. The reduction of bank loans through the liquidation of goods has undoubtedly made some progress in commercial fields since May 1, but the slack has been taken up at once in other directions, and the heaviest burden of Autumn demand is yet to be met. Inquiries in the textile field and in some lines of steel manufacturing show a puzzling situation. Clothing seems to be moving from retailers' stores on a scale not quite so large as in July at the same time that wholesale quotations remain rather firmly fixed on the Spring basis. In the automobile trade, taking one in which steel consumption is important, price reductions continue merely in the state of rumor, and the impression prevails in well informed quarters that costs will not permit any material concession for some time to come. A deduction from this is that a falling off in sales will increase overhead, cutting into profits, while high costs and wages will continue to absorb large amounts of credit. How wide an application this situation will have in industry naturally will be governed by the actual state of business, and the stock market has reflected of late a great deal of uncertainty over the business outlook three or four months hence. Until the crops are taken care of there seems small hope of a credit easement. At the same time, however, preparations by France to send between $20,000,000 and $50,000,000 gold before Oct. 15, when the Anglo-French loan falls due, promise a substantial accretion to the country's credit base.

The foreign exchanges were dull and heavy. In this market, too, there was no response to cabled reports of a strong Polish counteroffensive against the Russian Army. Cotton rallied in the morning from Monday's extensive fall, but was unsettled afterward. The grain markets were firm.

Associated Oil Earns $9.14 a Share.

The Associated Oil Company for the six months ended June 30 reports a surplus of $3,635,442, after all charges and taxes. This is equivalent to $9.14 a share on the capital stock. During the same period in 1919 the company earned $2,992,582 on the then outstanding capital stock, or $7.48 a share.

FRENCH LOAN PUT UP TO J. P. MORGAN & CO.

GOLD SHIPMENTS A FACTOR

No Suggestion Yet Made to American Bankers as to Amount of Refunding Issue.

Jean Parmentier, Administrator of the French Ministry of Finance, was a guest at luncheon yesterday at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., together with J. de Sieyes of the French Financial Commission and P. Boyer, a French manufacturer who accompanied Mr. Parmentier from Paris as his secretary. Afterward it was said that preparations for the liquidation of the French Government's part of the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan had been discussed generally, but particulars could not be gone into because the French representative was still waiting for advices from the French Treasury.

The partners of J. P. Morgan & Co. who attended the luncheon were E. R. Stettinius, Thomas Cochran and George Whitney. In the absence of Mr. Morgan, who sailed for his annual trip to England and Scotland, the negotiations in respect to the loan maturity in October are expected to be handled for the banking firm by these three members. Mr. de Sieyes, who spoke for Mr. Parmentier after the luncheon, said that no suggestions had yet been made to the American bankers about the amount of a refunding loan. It would be pure speculation, he asserted, to attempt to name a figure until the investment outlook had been thoroughly canvassed and a full survey made of the means at the disposal of the French Government for meeting the maturity.

Mr. de Sieyes emphasized the impossibility of the French tobacco monopoly figuring in arrangements because of the details and time necessary to complete the terms, provided that the French Government decided to dispose of it to American interests headed by George J. Whelan and Thomas F. Ryan.

It is believed that one of the earliest developments in the negotiations between the French officials and J. P. Morgan & Co. will centre in the matter of gold shipments. As less than two months remain before the Anglo-French loan falls due, the task of moving from Paris upward of $20,000,000, and perhaps as much as $50,000,000, of the metal will need to be expedited. It was learned that all the gold destined to New York will come from France, as the 2,000,000,000 francs of French Government metal lodged in London was deposited in 1916 and 1917 as collateral for loans an will not be disturbed.

The probable amount of the refunding loan for which France will ask is the subject of much comment in financial circles. Mr. de Sieyes said yesterday that no basis existed for statements that $147,000,000 would be the figure, as reported on Monday. The estimates range from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, the final figure to be determined by the state of the September investment market and the amount of exchange which France will have at her command at New York.

Mr. Parmentier has thus far refrained from discussing the loan, except for the observations he made upon arrival on Monday. Today he is scheduled to talk over with financial news reporters the results of French taxation methods, with their bearing upon French credit. His headquarters is with the French Financial Commission at 2 Rector Street.

MAY PAY $16,000,000 NOTES.

Announcement will probably be made today in Chicago of plans for meeting the $16,000,000 7 per cent. gold notes of the Chicago & Western Indiana Railroad, which fall due Sept. 1. Of the full amount $8,000,000 has been provided by the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to an announcement made by that body yesterday, and it is understood that the balance of the issue will be taken care of through the issuance of new paper for $8,000,000. Details as to the life of the new issue will be announced in Chicago.

The notes have been extended twice, once in 1918, after a fight between bankers and the Railroad Administration, which fixed a rate of interest on any new issue at 6 per cent., and again last year when the rate was increased to 7 per cent. In 1918 the notes were in default for most of September, when the bankers offered noteholders 1¼ per cent. compensation for a one-year extension. As no option was extended to shareholders in the two preceding extensions it is believed that they will be paid off.

RE-EXPORTING TRADE BOOMS

That the United States has developed into a large distributer of foreign merchandise since the beginning of the World War is shown in a statement issued by the National City Bank, which shows that the value of foreign merchandise re-exported from this country has grown from $35,000,000 in the year ended June 30, 1914, to $161,000,000 in 1920. In 1915 the value was $52,000,000, in 1917 $62,000,000 and in 1918 $81,000,000.

The bank says that the largest pre-war re-exportation of merchandise was in 1913, when the total was $37,377,791, or less than one-half that of the closing year of the war and less than one-fourth that of the fiscal year 1920.

TAXES ARE NOT INCLUDED

The report of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for the first six months of this year, issued today, shows a heavy increase in gross revenues from operations and operating commissions, as compared with the corresponding period a year ago. These amounted to $4,748,038, as compared with $2,772,524 in the preceding year, but were not enough to offset increases in operating cost, depreciation, overhead and the like, which advanced from $1,776,813 in the half year ended with June, 1919, to $3,652,181 this year. This left total net revenue of $1,198,815, as compared with $1,240,760 in the preceding year. In addition allowances have to be made in the net item which does not show 1920 estimated Federal taxes or amortization, which has not yet been set up in the company's accounts.

In his report to stockholders George J. Baldwin, President of the company, said in part:

"The fuel oil situation is disturbing on account of an inadequate supply of tankers for oil transportation. We have not been unmindful of the seriousness of this condition, and your company has therefore taken steps to safeguard its supply by placing a contract with New York Shipbuilding Corporation for the construction of an oil tank ship of 9,820 tons deadweight with a cargo capacity of 3,118,592 gallons of oil. The keel will be laid early this month, and delivery is expected in May, 1921. The tanker will be fitted as an oil burner, but in such a way that she can be converted to use coal at any time.

"In addition to a complete and efficient system of agencies serving the line at all ports reached by it, adequate terminal facilities are a prime necessity for securing a regular flow of permanent business. Realizing the growing importance of trade between China and the United States, your company has therefore purchased the Hankow Wharf and Godown Company's property at Hankow, China, this being one of the important points served by its transpacific steamers. Its position in the China trade is thereby strengthened."

Dunn Worsted Plant Shuts Down.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 17.—The Dunn Worsted Company announced today that its plant would close Saturday until Sept. 7. Four hundred employes will be affected. Dull market conditions are given as the reason for the shutdown.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Prices Again Decline.

A pronounced weakness was shown in stock market quotations yesterday. In some cases the declines ran to large proportions, considering the restricted volume of business. Unquestionably a good part of the decline in the more active issues was caused by short selling, there being little to shake the confidence of the bears. On the other hand, there was some surprise occasioned by the ease with which prices melted away in the early afternoon. This indicated that there was only a thin market for stocks at current levels. The public is out of the market for the time being, except in so far as there is some scattered liquidation by those who have become tired of holding securities bought at higher prices. In a way prices ignored the news of the day, which was of a distinctly better tone than for some time. The Polish situation was a bit more encouraging, and it was expected that the market would reflect this.

The Chemical Stocks.

The chemical stocks which will figure in the so-called "chemical merger" have been giving traders a busy time recently. When the details of the plan for the merger were announced last week the stocks responded by making a substantial advance. Yesterday they declined. General Chemical was off 5 points, Barrett Company lost 4¾ points and National Aniline and Chemical dropped 3 points. Apparently the bears were once more active. Furthermore, it is probable that the rise following the publication of many details of the contemplated merger was in part a result of covering by the timid shorts. With the news having cooled a bit the policy of selling the shares made progress. The merger arrangement has not been completed, but the plans are within the power of the insiders, and the only hitch that could develop would have to come from that source. It appears now that the merger will be completed some time in the early Fall, as was predicted several days ago.

Doheny Issues Heavy.

Mexican Petroleum and Pan American Petroleum lost ground rapidly yesterday and the recessions came despite rumors that increases in the dividend rate on the two issues were in contemplation. Mexican Petroleum in particular followed a peculiar course. In the early morning the stock was strong, but by afternoon heavy selling pressure was exerted and the price declined quickly. All reports indicate that the Doheny companies are doing a larger business than ever and there is a growing demand from abroad for Mexican oil. With drilling operations opening up big new gushers, Mexican Petroleum is in line to steadily expand. The stock market, however, is not taking into consideration these factors for the time being.

Copper Market Dull.

The price of copper continues to range around the 19-cent level, but those who wish to shop among the smaller companies can undoubtedly get concessions from this figure even to the extent perhaps of half a cent a pound. The big producers are, however, holding to the 19-cent level. Buying for the time being is listless, but it may be expected that with the passing of the Summer months a more active demand for the metal will be created in anticipation of the Fall and Winter business. There is, however, nothing to indicate that demand will quicken to the extent of bringing any great increase in mining operations. The one favorable factor with relation to the copper companies was the reported lessening of costs by some of them during the second quarter of the year. Should this continue, 10-cent copper might afford the basis of fair earnings.

Steel Stocks Sell Off.

There was heaviness in the steel shares, but it was not by any means as pronounced as that in some other parts of the industrial list. The fact is that all reports indicate that the steel companies are doing a good business and there is nothing to indicate that it will fall off for some time to come. Steel men are optimistic. There is one favorable factor—that shipments are moving more freely—and this would tend to relieve the congestion at the manufacturing points. It was this congestion which threatened some time ago to become so serious as to cause a shutting down of certain mills. United States Steel was not traded in on a large scale yesterday. The shares in the late trading made a nice recovery, so that the net loss was not great.

New Cars Must Wait.

Local railroad managers have verified reports from equipment circles that agents of the carriers are not buying the number of new freight cars it was expected would be inquired for as soon as the earnings of the roads under private ownership became assured. In many instances the roads are ordering no new cars at all, but are putting their best efforts into placing the old cars with builders, as well as in their own shops, for a thorough overhauling. This movement, which has become general since July 1, is the direct result of efforts on the part of the roads to live up to the program for efficiency adopted at a meeting of member roads of the Association of Railway Executives on that date. At that time it was agreed by the member roads to reduce bad-order cars to a maximum of 4 per cent. of the total cars owned. In the case of locomotives the improvement has been more marked, it being understood that the Pennsylvania Railroad has less than 200 of its 7,000 unfit for service, compared with many times that number only a few months ago.

While there has been much opposition from shippers to the new demurrage rates announced by the Car Service Commission of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was said yesterday that the orders have brought results. It has been the opinion in conservative railroad and banking circles for some time that the only way an abuse of car service could be reduced would be through a sharp increase in demurrage charges or in the incorporation of paragraphs in the transportation laws of the country which would forbid the holding of rolling stock at delivery points more than a reasonable time. Under the old demurrage rules many shippers of valuable merchandise found it worth while to use the cars for storage purposes, and took their leisure about unloading them. Apparently the Car Service Commission is trying out the theory that increased car charges will stop such practices and will release equipment needed elsewhere.

One of the outstanding features in yesterday's declining stock market was the stock of American Ship and Commerce. Publication by the United States Shipping Board of a summary of the agreement between the company and the Hamburg-American Line, which will open some of the latter's most important pre-war trade lanes to American interests, was interpreted as constructive and the stock moved into higher ground on a better turnover than for some time. This was in the face of the general gloomy outlook taken by shipping interests in regard to the trend of ocean freight rates to lower levels. Students of world shipping conditions say there is a surplus of ordinary merchant tonnage and they do not look for appreciable stiffening in rates for some weeks. Some apprehension has been expressed over the attitude Great Britain will take on a new and lower standard for rates. Other issues in the shipping group such as both classes of International Mercantile Marine stock, Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies and the United Fruit eased off, apparently in sympathy with the general list, although the turnover in Atlantic Gulf was large enough to indicate that the professionals had hammered the stock in their general bear drive.

More for Your Money

The only way you can get more for your money than you could a few years ago is to purchase good securities. Some of the best railroad, government and corporation bonds yield from 7% up. There are obvious opportunities which should be taken advantage of by those who have large or small funds immediately available.

Opportunities to Buy Good Bonds

Quotations of securities do not necessarily indicate their safety. For example, market conditions and tax laws may affect unfavorably the prices of certain bonds and notes without impairing their safety. Careful private investors are now offered opportunities to invest on a more profitable basis than at any time during the last fifty years.

What is the outlook for these properties in the light of the improved railroad situation? Will future earnings justify a maintenance of present dividends? Are the railroads efficiently operated? Are the rate increases sufficient to restore earnings to the pre-war level?

These and other questions are answered in a careful analysis of the properties which we have recently prepared for our clients.

A few extra copies are available and will be sent to the first inquirers. Send your name and business address, with two cents postage, for Circular No. 541.

Closed Mortgages

$200,000 IN BONDS DISAPPEAR IN MAILS

$5,000 REWARD OFFERED

Negotiable railroad bonds valued at $200,000 were either lost or stolen in the mails en route from a Milwaukee bank to the brokerage house of Paine Webber Company at 25 Broad Street, some time prior to July 29, it became known yesterday when the Pinkerton Detective Agency circularized the country with the notice of a reward for the return of the securities. So careful had been the brokers to conceal news of the robbery that the police of Chicago, where their Western branch office is located, had not been notified of the loss.

William A. Pinkerton, head of the agency, is known to have personally assumed charge of the search for the missing bonds. It is the theory of the investigators that the securities were taken by an agent of a ring of bond thieves, which hoped to dispose of them through fences in American and Canadian cities. The many clues run down by representatives of the Federal Government and the Pinkerton agency have turned out to be worthless, it was said, and the sending out of the circulars was construed as a tacit admission on the part of the investigators that they were without new leads to follow.

There were eight sets of securities, all of which were mailed from Milwaukee on July 29. Two days later the Milwaukee office inquired of the Chicago and New York offices of Paine Webber Company if the package had been received. With the discovery of the loss or theft Government and private detectives were sent to Middle Western cities to search for the bonds.

M. J. O'Brien, resident partner of Paine Webber Company at Chicago, denied that any employe of the firm had been involved in the case in any way. He said he had no direct evidence to support the natural robbery theory.

"All I can tell you is that the bonds, which would bring not more than $156,000 if sold through regular channels, though valued at $200,000, were mailed at Milwaukee and receipted for by the postal authorities but never reached our New York office," Mr. O'Brien said. "Nothing was said of the loss by our firm on orders from the Government and at the instance of the detective agency. The bonds may be missing in the mails."

2 St. Louis-San Francisco prior lien 4s, 1950, Series A, January, 1920 coupons attached, $25,000.

This is the second largest bond theft reported as occurring between Chicago and Milwaukee in recent months. Liberty Bonds valued at $128,000 were sent by the First National Bank of Madison, Wis., to the First National Bank in Chicago three months ago but were never received.

WANTS RAIL LABOR TO DECENTRALIZE

HE ASSAILS THE AGITATORS

Believes Workers Themselves Will Demand Return to System Rewarding Industry.

Nationalization of agreements, a national board of adjustment for grievances, and a countrywide standardization of working conditions for railroad labor, which obtained during Federal control, were sharply attacked yesterday by E. E. Loomis, President of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Mr. Loomis maintains that the Transportation act passed at the end of last February aimed to decentralize railroad management and in his statement says that the abolition of piece work which was effected during Federal control is unfair to efficient and intelligent workmen.

"The return of the railroads to private control," said Mr. Loomis, "coupled with the recent rate award of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has given birth to the popular idea that it is now "up to the railroad managers." It is argued that at last they have fair legislation and increased revenues, and that they must now demonstrate their fitness to handle the task before them if private operation of the railroads rather than Government ownership is to be the future of the properties.

"It may be that private control is on trial. Equally true, however, is the fact that another great element in our national life also is on trial. Not only must the railroad managers show their ability, but the men and women they employ must demonstrate their willingness to work and their right to the wages recently awarded them by the United States Railroad Labor Board.

Finds Situation Complicated.

"The situation is complicated by conditions which became possible during Government control. Under the United States Railroad Administration the various crafts engaged in railroad work affiliated in a closely knit organization which enabled their leaders to exercise great influence at Washington and to obtain, among other things: Standardized wages and working conditions for the whole country; centralization of discipline enforcement in the hands of a board located at Washington; abolition of piece work. Experienced railroad managers always have opposed these ideas as contrary to efficient operation and good discipline.

"In the meantime, requests for increased wages (to which practically all classes of employes were entitled because of the high cost of living) were not acted upon by the Railroad Administration, but were left to the Labor Board created under the Transportation act. While this situation obtained a part of the railroad workers—as a whole a body of upright American citizens of which the nation may be proud—became the prey of unscrupulous agitators. The result was the outlaw strikes of last Spring, from which some roads have not as yet fully recovered.

"The award of the Labor Board, generally satisfactory, has answered the one serious complaint of labor. The splendid esprit de corps of American railroad men, however, still staggers from the body blows it has received. Fortunately, the effect of these blows is wearing off and a sincere effort upon the part of railroad managers to build up the old-time feeling of loyalty to their lines is producing results.

Sees Reform Opportunity.

"The Transportation act of 1920 afforded a great help in this direction. It offered an opportunity to decentralize the railroads and place the operation of the lines in the general offices of each system rather than in Washington, restoring all of the personal initiative which goes with the realization that work consistently well done is going to result in greater opportunity for promotion and increased pay.

"Union leaders oppose this, however, and are urging national agreements, the establishment of a national board of adjustment for the handling of grievances and perpetuation of the country-wide standardization of working conditions which obtained during Government control. This wholesale standardisation probably is convenient for the leaders, but in many cases it is unfair to the rank and file of workers, and experience reveals that it already has been the cause of much justified dissatisfaction. For example, in the Southwest working conditions cannot be identical with those of the congested manufacturing centres of the East. Different ways of living, the variance in costs of food, fuel, clothing and shelter and the operating methods of railroads so widely separated must be considered if justice is to prevail. In short, wholesale standardization would strike a death-blow at the decentralization intended under the Transportation act and the railroads would be robbed of the home rule necessary to the maintenance of efficiency and proper discipline.

Appeals to the Workers.

"A great opportunity for ambitious workmen themselves to build up morale within the rank and file would lie in the restoration of the piece-work system, the basis of shop efficiency before Government control. While it prevailed the man who had energy and ability had a strong incentive to conscientious labor. It brought him increased earnings over the lazy and inefficient worker. Abandonment of piece work by the Railroad Administration placed these two men on the same plane. The incentive of the ambitious, active worker was killed—no matter how hard he strove he could earn no more than the indifferent and inefficient fellow at the next machine. Fortunately, under our American system of education, the number of ambitious workers with brains must grow, and it is unlikely they will rest content to remain on the same basis with mere time-servers. The coming of the time when they will make themselves felt in the union organizations means much to railroad efficiency.

"There must be constant education to accomplish these results. The fallacies of the agitators who fatten upon discontent, the economic losses to the workers themselves through useless strikes, must be pointed out, and, above all, the self-respect of the workers must be encouraged. Much of the future success of American railroads depends upon their employes and the service they perform. If the men come to realize that they can hold the friendship and interest of the shipping and traveling public by a whole-hearted spirit of co-operation under the Transportation act, that in this path lies their road toward progress, promotion and prosperity, they will play a big part in giving our country the transportation efficiency necessary to successful commercial development."

What Are We Selling?

One of our clients recently gave as their reason for utilizing our Engineering Valuation facilities that their company found, after thorough investigation, that we had not only the organization to handle the valuation of large industrial enterprises, but we also had what they regarded as equally essential, the necessary engineering facilities to collaborate with them in giving the proper consideration to the problems of pricing, depreciation, obsolescence and rates, as well as advice in the matters of operation and expansion.

It is significant in our experience that the old fashioned Appraisal with its inherent limitations is rapidly giving place to the modern Engineering Valuation, which not only comprehends the former but deals in an engineering and commercial way with the problems of production and management, the desirability of improvement in which has never been a more vital and controlling factor than it is today.

We would welcome an opportunity of advising with you.

Write to us and our representative will explain our service.

COMMUTERS FIGHT JERSEY FARE RISE

LINES ASK QUICK ACTION

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 17.—The New Jersey State Board of Public Utility Commissioners today took into conference the request of the railroads of this State to approve of the rise in passenger fares and freight rates recently allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and effective Aug. 26.

The railroads were represented collectively by Henry W. Bickle, Francis Gowaen and A. H. Elder. The South Jersey Commuters' Association, opposing increases were represented by former Assemblyman J. Russel Carrow. Jersey City was represented by Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles M. Egan; Newark by its Board of Trade and Mayor Gillen. Other municipalities represented were Long Branch, Morristown, Hackettstown and Paterson. The New Jersey State Highway Commission, through Engineer Wasser, asked that the rates be not made effective until Dec. 31 at least, in order that the State road work might be finished under present rates for which contracts had been made.

Mr. Carrow said the Commuters' Association, in remonstrating against the proposed increases in passenger fares, desired to place itself on record as not protesting against any rates necessary to increase the wages of railroad employes. It protested, Mr. Carrow said, against granting further revenue to the United Railroad of New Jersey, paying 10 per cent. dividends; the Central Railroad, paying 8 per cent.; the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western paying 20 per cent.; the Reading Company, paying 8 per cent., and the Delaware & Hudson, paying 9 per cent.

Representatives of the railroads explained that in the event of the utility commission granting the increase commutation tickets purchased previous to Aug. 1, and up to Aug. 26, would be honored one month after date of purchase. They requested the board to suspend the 20-day rule for filing rates and make the rates effective in five days.

O'Malley Heads Market Committee.

Mayor Hylan last night announced the appointment of Edwin J. O'Malley, Commissioner of Public Markets, as Chairman of a Committee on Terminal Markets. The other members of the committee are John H. Delaney, Transit Construction Commissioner; Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures; Murray Hulbert, Dock Commissioner, and Frank Mann, Tenement House Commissioner.

WHEAT MARKET FIRM.

Closes with Prices 1¾ to 2¼ Cents Higher.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Reports of a liberal export business yesterday firmed up wheat prices quickly today after opening 1c lower to ¼c higher, with December 236 to 236½ and March 237. The rally carried prices above the finish of yesterday within the first few minutes of trading.

Wheat prices hardened later because of the export business reported with Sweden, Germany and Holland yesterday. This caused considerable exchanging of futures, which sent the market upward, the close being strong and near the high point of the day, prices ranging from 1¾ to 2¼c higher at the finish, with December being 238¼ to 238½ and March 240¼.

NEWTON TO CONSULT RAND ON PAY BILL

UNABLE TO REACH DEPUTY

But Declares $15,000 Fee for Four Months' Work "Reasonable and Should Be Paid."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 17.—The first thing Attorney General Charles D. Newton did today when he returned to Albany was to attempt to get in touch with William Rand in New York City. The Attorney General said he wished to consult with Colonel Rand in relation to the bill for $15,000 which has been held up by Controller Craig, who advised the Attorney General that the claim was "grossly excessive."

"I have the letter of Controller Craig before me," said the Attorney General, "and I also have my opinion of a public official who gives his letter to the press before he sends it. He was asking information of me which I shall try to give.

"Several times today I have endeavored to get Colonel Rand on the telephone at his office in Wall Street, New York City. The telephone girl finally told me there was no such person and I had to look up the telephone number and give it to her. Up to this time I have not been able to reach Colonel Rand, but I hope to do so later. So, you see, I am unable to answer Controller Craig's letter just now, but I shall do so as soon as I am able.

"Colonel Rand spent four months in this work investigating traction and other matters and presented a bill for $15,000, which bill I have approved. He certified to the reasonableness of it and I agree with him. The Controller reminds me that my salary is $10,000 a year, of which I am quite well aware. My conscience is very clear on the subject. The charge is reasonable and should be paid."

ONLY SLIGHT RALLY IN COTTON MARKET

Trading Reflects Uncertainty Over Consumption and Growing Crop.

The cotton market continued yesterday to reflect much uncertainty among traders over the outlook for consumption at home and abroad and of the growing crop. The rally which might have been expected in view of Monday's sharp reaction occurred during the morning, but was rather feeble. The October option got up to 30.08 cents, against the closing bid price of 29.63 cents the day before, and December rose to 29.08, while the other months advanced 19 to 30 points, with the exception of May, which was sluggish all the way along.

The short covering movement petered out before noon, for lower prices at Liverpool offered no incentive for bullish operations, and a 50-point fall in the local spot market indicate a reluctant demand by spinners. In final trading prices were irregular, with a fairly firm tone prevailing.

Traders were inclined to emphasize reports of lessened manufacturing at spinning centres and the bearish element devoted much time to consideration of increasing crop prospects. Estimates coming from Texas, Oklahoma and Mississippi were persistent in expanding the probable yields in those States, and, despite too generous a rainfall in Northern Texas and parts of Georgia and Alabama, the temperature appears to be favorable to the growing plant. The weekly Government weather bulletin will be awaited today with much interest for the official information it gives on the rainfall. Spot cotton dropped 80 points English points at Liverpool and sales were moderate at that centre.

WOULD JAIL 'BEAR' RAIDERS.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 17.—"I hope the time will come when some President of the United States will put in jail the people responsible for these bear drives and the destroying of the investment earnings of the country," said former Governor E. C. Stokes, President of the Mechanics' National Bank of this city, and Chairman of the Republican State Committee, in a letter today to John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency at Washington.

"It is a perfect outrage," the letter continued, "to destroy values the way it is done on the stock market. A very small percentage of the actual holdings is ever traded in, but the innocent investor, who isn't selling loses the value of his stock if he ever wants to sell, because somebody in Wall Street sells it short. Barn burning is a virtuous occupation compared with this monstrous, malleaval robbery of the so-called 'bears.'"

Italian Bank Improves Building.

Plans were filed yesterday by H. M. Clawson, architect, for a three-story addition to the eight-story office structure, on plot 32.2 by 123.9, at 62 and 64 William Street, southeast corner of Cedar Street. The cost is estimated at $100,000.

The building was purchased last June by the Banca Commerciale Italiana of Milan, Italy, which intends to occupy three or four floors, subleasing the remaining space for offices.

$5,000,000 PROJECT ON NINTH AVENUE

IS VALUED AT $1,500,000

New Syndicate Plans to Erect Eight-Story Buildng at Cost of About $3,500,000.

A tall structure especially designed for the use of the printing trades is to replace the old landmark occupied since 1831 by the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind and taking in the entire block front on the east side of Ninth Avenue, from Thirty-third to Thirty-fourth Street.

Negotiations have practically been completed for the sale of the property by the institution trustees to a syndicate headed by John J. Buckley, which plans to erect an eight-story printing crafts building at a cost in the neighborhood of $3,500,000. It is understood that the entire grade floor of the building will be taken by the United States Government for use as a Foreign Exchange and Parcel Post Branch in connection with the big Post Office at Eighth Avenue and Thirty-third Street. The institute property, which has a frontage on Ninth Avenue of 197 feet and runs back 400 feet on each street, has been held at $1,500,000.

In July, 1917, the institute purchased a site for a new school in the Bronx from Vincent Astor, including the Bradford tract, consisting of about eighteen acres lying between Williamsbridge Road, Astor Avenue, Bronxwood Avenue and Pelham Parkway. At the time of purchase it was announced that the land would be improved with buildings to cost approximately $1,000,000. Following the purchase of this land the property on Ninth Avenue was placed on the market. Since then many offers have been made for it.

The Institute for the Education of the Blind was founded by Dr. Samuel Akerly and the buildings now standing on the Ninth Avenue property were opened in 1831.

The undertaking of this improvement, it is believed, will strongly influence the development of the blocks to the west of the Pennsylvania Station, which have long been awaiting exploitation.

FREIGHT RISE TO ADD LITTLE TO FOOD COST

SPECIFIC CASES ARE CITED

Only Four Mills More on One Head of Cauliflower and Nine Mills on Peck of Potatoes.

Ralph Peters, President of the Long Island Railroad Company, yesterday issued a statement in which he pointed out the limited extent to which living costs will be affected on account of the increase in freight rates, which become effective on Aug. 26.

"The railroads," said President Peters, "are carrying on an intensive, country-wide campaign of education, aiming to show the true relation of the new scale of freight charges to the increased cost of foodstuffs, articles of wearing apparel, &c., in each particular community.

"By this means it is hoped that the public will be prepared to prevent any attempts at profiteering resulting from the advanced freight rates. While it is admitted that in the case of some articles and commodities small increases in price may be justified, nevertheless the amounts which in any instance could fairly be added to the present prices are a very small fraction of the whole, and in the case of practically every article or commodity of daily consumption the increases in transportation charges are relatively so small as to be practically negligible.

"For the enlightenment of the people of Long Island I shall present a few examples of actual increases in the freight charges, applied to typical hauls, on some everyday articles of food, wearing apparel, building materials, &c.

"Cauliflower, potatoes and oysters are among the principal food products shipped from Long Island to Brooklyn for consumption in the metropolitan district, and they are sold by the head, peck and bushel, respectively. Exactly how the increased freight rates will affect these foodstuffs may be gleaned from the following tabulation:

TO BROOKLYN.

Article.	Shipped from	Inc. Over Present Rate.
Head of Cauliflower	Riverhead	4 mills
Peck of potatoes	Riverhead	9 mills
Bushel of oysters	Sayville	7 cents

"Under the new rates which go into effect on Aug. 26, it will cost only three mills more than it does now, to ship a pound of fresh meat from Chicago to Mineola, L. I., a distance of over 1,000 miles.

"One hundred pounds of sugar shipped from New York City to Huntington, L. I., will cost eight cents above the present freight rate, or, an advance of only eight-tenths of a mill per pound.

"The rate on a pair of men's shoes from Boston, Mass., to Hempstead, L. I., will exceed the present charge by eight mills.

"Taking a few items of building material, we find that under the new freight rate schedule the additional charge for shipping a 100 pound bag of cement from Northhampton, Pa., to Freeport, L. I., will be only five and one-half cents, while the increased shipping rate in 100 pounds of lumber from Lees, South Carolina, to Patchogue, L. I., will be thirteen and one-half cents."

A Sales Manager
Who Has Managed Sales

That is what we want

A man who knows he can handle and direct a sales force—because he has done it somewhere else:

Who is the type of executive who can reorganize and put men to work on the basis of getting the business because they like it and believe in their product:

A man who knows how to merchandise and market a specialty that is already a national success:

Who knows the copper and brass ware trade that has its outlet through hardware dealers, house furnishings and department stores.

If you are certain these qualifications are a recital of your own—even if your experience has been in some other line—and are interested in the proposition on a straight salary basis—

You might write us as fully as possible in confidence. If we're interested we'll arrange an interview. W 372 Times.
